POLIO DRIVE DOUBLES AIM IN ONE NIGHT

Vexing Issues Encountered In Labor Field

The Daily Colonist today presents the first of a series of articles on labor-management relations and on British Columbia's controversial Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act. The Colonist believes the subject is of particular interest at this time, with British Columbia in the midst of an unprecedented industrial expansion which will depend for its ultimate success very largely on harmonious labor relations.

The government has indicated that the act will be amended at the forthcoming session of the legislature, but has given no indication what direction the amendments will take.

The author of the series is E. E. Pearlman, QC (Ont.), a distinguished Victoria lawyer who has wide experience with labor law and in labor negotiations, acting both for management and labor. The opinions he expresses are his own and not necessarily those of The Daily Colonist.

BY E. E. PEARLMAN, QC (ONT.)

Is British Columbia industry, with the highest average wage rate in Canada, being priced out of the market by high labor costs? Should international unions with headquarters in the U.S.A. interfere with negotiations in Canada between Canadian employees of Canadian companies? Should strikes be permitted when the welfare of the community as a whole is endangered? Is the British Columbia Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act slanted in favor of labor? Should a man be denied the right to earn a living because he refuses to join, or is expelled from a union? These are highly controversial questions which many British Columbia employers are now asking.

On the other hand there are equally controversial questions coming from trade union circles. Why shouldn't an employer be compelled to distribute a fair share of his profits among his employees? Why shouldn't management put up the necessary funds to enable a long-term employee to enjoy a well-earned pension? Why should the government, or any agency, for that matter, supervise or scrutinize the taking of a strike vote? Should the courts be permitted to interfere by injunction, or otherwise, in labor disputes?

In this day of peak industrial activity, most of us have pondered these questions. Many, if not all of us, have felt the effect of a strike. Perhaps not directly, but certainly indirectly. Perhaps not in loss of wages, but most assuredly in some other form, such as lack of transportation, scarcity of commodities, increase in prices, or merely inconvenience. It is safe to say that all of us at one time or another have been directly and deeply concerned by the mere threat of a strike.

Noisy Strife Heard

Scarcely a week passes that we do not read of a dispute between an employer and his employees. We hear accusations, recriminations and fulminations by management and by labor. We read of conferences, consultations and negotiations. We hear of labor relations, collective bargaining, grievance procedure, boards of conciliation, arbitration, fringe benefits, closed shops, feather bedding, welfare funds and numerous other strange terms peculiar to this field of human relationship.

It is not my intention to deal with this difficult subject of labor relations in a technical or narrow sense. On the contrary, I shall endeavor to clarify in general terms the more interesting and most common problems involved. The views expressed are my own.

I well realize that industrial disputes sometimes become violently bitter, and that the parties to the dispute usually have firm, fixed and one-sided views. However, having been privileged to sit in on numerous employer-employee disputes, perhaps I can perform a useful service by a frank but fair discussion of the problems of both labor and management.

At any rate, with full knowledge of the difficulties involved, but with malice toward none, I shall give my own views of some phases of the British Columbia Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act, present trends in labor legislation, trade union activities, picketing, lockouts, injunctions and other related subjects.

Not so many years ago it was unlawful for a number of workmen to band together and make demands upon their employer. Such action was considered to be criminal conspiracy or combination in restraint of trade. Today not only is it lawful for employees to form unions, guilds or associations, it is in fact unlawful for the employer to refuse to negotiate with them. It is contrary to law for an employer to refuse to employ any person, or discriminate against any person, because he happens to be a member of a trade union or employees' association.

Marching Mothers Collect $62,540

Victorians dug deep in their pockets to assist the Mothers' March on Polio last night—dug to the extent of more than $60,000 or double the drive's objective during a brief 90 minutes.

With yet more to come by way of mailed cheques and an outdoor theatre meeting tonight, a grand total of $62,540 was announced by officials last night.

Bewildered campaign officials shouted with joy each time a new figure was chalked up on the blackboard at campaign headquarters.

"As far as the Kinsmen are concerned we are more than proud and gratified to administer a campaign that the citizens feel needs such a tremendous support as polio," said Jack Philion, club president.

An army of volunteer workers bent over desks counting money. The huge boxes of envelopes containing this money were checked and double-checked.

Volunteer canvassers told of the enthusiastic way they were greeted at thousands of city homes. There were the human interest stories too, such as the little boy who gave 23 cents he made by selling pussy willows at a roadside stand, or the aged pensioner who donated 50 cents even though he couldn't afford it.

"The totals from many districts more than surpass those given for Community Chest," said Mr. Philion. "The collectors did a wonderful job."

There were close to 3,800 mothers canvassing through the city from 6.30 to 7.30 p.m.

The money was brought into campaign headquarters, counted then sent to the B.C. Electric offices where it was recounted and bundled up. The money was then banked—the bank remaining open especially for the purpose.

One woman in Oak Bay made 20 calls and came in with $120.

The response of the mothers was so great that all those wishing to help in the canvassing could not be used. Kinsmen said last night they deeply appreciated those volunteers.

"It's unbelievable. Have you ever seen anything like it?" chortled Mr. Philion, when the $60,000 mark was reached. "This is the first campaign the Kinsmen have ever run. And the total expenses are well under $1,000."

Hughie Francis and Bud Page, district organizers, praised the support of both the mothers and the people of Victoria. "It's just too terrific," said Mr. Page.

The last Community Chest drive started October 1 to get $210,000. By October 16 they had only $93,000 compared with the $62,540 collected by the Kinsmen in an hour and a half last night.

High praise was showered last night on marching mothers and Kinsmen who carried their one-hour porch-light drive for contributions for the B.C. Polio Fund to a resounding success.

"It just goes to show what a well-organized and enthusiastic effort will produce for such a deserving objective," he declared.

Dr. J. L. Murray Anderson, medical superintendent of Royal Jubilee Hospital, treatment centre of all Vancouver Island polio victims, described the drive as "very worthwhile."

"The efforts of the Kinsmen were most helpful in providing us with equipment last year," he said. "This will mean a great deal to those who already have polio and place us in a secure position to meet any epidemic which may come next summer."

Logan Mayhew, chairman of the board of directors of Queen Alexandra Solarium, where many young post-polio patients receive rehabilitation treatment, declared the success of the drive will do a great deal to alleviate suffering and to provide equipment to help in the future.

Courtney Haddock, vice-president of the Community Chest and chairman of the committee which handled the Chest's 1953 drive for funds, joined in commending those responsible for success of the polio fund campaign.

But he said it is unlikely that the Community Chest would try another one-night porch-light campaign as it did in 1950 and 1951, despite the over-subscription to the polio fund campaign.

Mr. Haddock said the short, porch-light drives have great dramatic appeal, but doubted that even this type of appeal would be enough to raise the annual amount required by the Chest, which now exceeds $200,000.

Mr. Haddock said he would like to see one combined drive for all medical charities such as polio, cancer, arthritis, multiple sclerosis and cerebral palsy, and a single united appeal for other types of charities.

It is too bad, he said, that surpluses from drives which go beyond their objectives because of their dramatic appeal cannot go to other deserving charities with less of this type of appeal.

Abrupt Acceptance Upsets Soviet Line

BERLIN (U.P.) — The Western Allies, in a surprise attempt to force Soviet agreement to the Austrian state treaty, accepted yesterday all Russia's proposed changes to the last five articles blocking acceptance of the pact.

The Allied manoeuvre was proposed by U.S. Secretary of State Dulles and caught Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov flat-footed.

At the end of a four-hour debate, the United States, Britain and France agreed to accept Soviet amendments to five articles of the treaty on which Big Four agreement has stalled.

Molotov, surprised and apparently dismayed, insisted the articles be turned over to the foreign ministers' deputies. He then agreed to discuss the Western acceptance of the articles Sunday afternoon.

The concessions offered by the West would, among other things, give the Russians enormous economic booty, including payment in cash or goods of $150,000,000 for former German assets left in Austria.

Wreck Of Jet Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — U.S. air force investigating teams yesterday waded through deep snow probing the wreckage of an F86 Sabre Jet strewn along a Grouse Mountain ski run.

The officers arrived from McChord Field, Wash. less than 24 hours after the plane, piloted by Lieut. Lamar J. Barlow of Tacoma, Wash., rammed into the mountainside in a misty rainstorm.

The jet was on a routine flight from McChord when the electronic compass failed and the pilot became lost. After sending a distress call, he picked up radio beams from McChord and Blaine, Wash., and was believed planning to make an emergency landing here when he crashed.

However, Maj. Craig Fairbun, leader of the investigating team, said yesterday that Barlow may have thought he was over Tacoma at the time.

Maj. Fairbun said the wreckage would be kept under strict security guard until detonating teams have exploded or defused cannon-type rockets which the plane carried.

Tug-of-War Nearly Fatal

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) —An inter-class tug-of-war was nearly fatal Saturday for a Stanford sophomore co-ed who was trampled face down into mud on a field of the Stanford campus.

Patricia A. Powers, 19, of Bellevue, Wash., was unconcious from suffocation when milling freshmen and sophomore students spotted her.

Burns Fatal To Two

DUNCAN — A mother and daughter, both badly burned in a house fire last Wednesday, died within a few hours of each other yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Melinda Barrett, 74, died on Saturday morning in hospital and her daughter, Mrs. Ivy Holen, 45, died Saturday evening. Both suffered third degree burns in the fire.

Police believe Mrs. Holen's night clothes caught fire while she was lighting a circulating heater in the living room of their home at 732 Trunk Road.

Mrs. Barrett's clothing caught fire when she went to the assistance of her daughter whose movements were restricted by a cast on her leg.

The two women, both in a state of shock, were discovered sitting in the kitchen by a neighbor, Dick Price, and were rushed to King's Daughters' Hospital.

Mrs. Holen was born in Duncan. Her mother came to this district 50 years ago from Missouri.

There will be a double inquest next week.

London Murder Like Holmes Case

LONDON (U.P.) — Scotland Yard sifted through 4,000 love letters Saturday for clues in the double murder of "Lady" Mary Menzies and her exotic daughter.

The letters, dating back to 1931, traced the adventurous life of Isobel Chesney, Mrs. Menzies' daughter, through the sunny spots of the golden Riviera Coast to her death in an old folks' home in a London suburb Thursday.

The Yard also flashed an appeal for help to international police headquarters in Paris to hunt a tall, curly-headed, bearded man with pierced ears for questioning.

The bizarre double-murder was assuming many of the aspects of a Sherlock Holmes mystery plot. The setting was a rambling two-story Victorian building occupied by 19 aged men and women; the victims a "china doll-like" elderly woman who claimed nobility and her attractive fun-loving daughter; The murderer was believed to have struck around midnight after a tryst with the younger woman; and there were two dogs that didn't bark, which police said indicated the killer was known to them.

California Hit By Rain, Floods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A broad storm marched through California yesterday, closing trans-continental highways, battering the coast with howling gales and threatening the lowlands with floods.

In Southern California, one of the heaviest rainstorms in three years brought flood damage to widespread areas of Los Angeles and Ventura counties.

The weather bureau in a special warning forecast two to four inches in Southern California coastal and mountain regions by tonight.

Forecaster E. S. Kurtz said some sections of Southern California may get as much as six inches of rain, a prediction which renewed fears of flooding in foothill areas.

Bus and car passengers were evacuated by lifeguards in rowboats at some intersections in Santa Monica and west Los Angeles.

At one depressed Los Angeles intersection witnesses reported a car went under water and the motorist came up swimming.

Hundreds of homes in the Los Angeles metropolitan area were flooded, slides blocked some highways, thousands of automobiles were stalled and a funeral had to be postponed when the hearse was flooded.

Water 10 feet deep was reported from one area in west Los Angeles when a storm drain became plugged on Eastborne Avenue in a hollow. Six cars, their doors closed and windows up, floated about on a temporary lake. When the plug gave way and the water drained, a sedan came to rest atop a convertible which hadn't floated.

Ava Gardner, Cast, Adrift

SAN REMO, Italy (AP)— Ava Gardner and almost the whole cast of the film "The Barefoot Countess" were missing Saturday for several hours after they sailed from here in a tiny boat.

The boat carrying Miss Gardner, American director Joseph Mankiewicz and Italian actors Valentina Cortese and Rossano Brazzi, ran out of fuel in rough seas and went adrift off the Italian Riviera.

Nickel to 20 Cents for Coffee

Cup Cost Likely To Stay Put

Coffee is being sold in Victoria restaurants at prices ranging from five cents to 20 cents a cup—and the situation is likely to stay just the way it is.

Despite the increase in bulk coffee prices, restaurateurs are just a little afraid that a rise in the cost per cup would alienate the affections of some of their customers. One U.S. coffee wholesaler has been quoted in a news magazine as saying a 10-cent-a-pound increase would be required to justify a boost of one cent a cup at the counter.

A Colonist survey last night indicated that only one out of a score of restaurants was considering raising the price.

"The whole matter has been left to the discretion of the individual operators," said Philip Chan, president of the Victoria Restaurant Association, last night.

Nickel cups of coffee are obtainable at Woolworth's, Kresge's and Metropolitan stores.

Proprietors of restaurants said to be charging 20 cents a cup could not be pinned down last night. The price of the coffee was always "included" in the meal, one said.

"We don't sell coffee by itself," said Fred Haupt, owner of the Little Harbor Swiss restaurant. "On the other hand, I think restaurants should charge 15 cents a cup."

Elmer D. McEwen, managing director of Terry's, said the price would remain at a dime there.

"It costs me six cents a cup without any handling at all," said Mr. McEwen. "There are wages to be paid on top of that."

Only owner who said he was considering raising the price was T. W. Rayanos of the Cameo Cafe. "It's still a dime, but it should be higher. We are thinking of raising this," he said.

Most city hotels charge 25 cents for a pot of coffee in their dining rooms. A pot usually holds a little more than two cups. (See also story on page 33.)

Inflated coffee prices mean the difference between cafe coffee and thermos coffee to these nurses. Their hospital coffee bar, to keep ahead of the price jump, pushed its price from seven cents to 10 cents. Nurses Mrs. Ida Gough, holding the 10-cent piece, and Miss Elsa Nielsen, conduct a quiet private protest by taking their own coffee to the bar with them.

Rome Police Chisel Name Off Church

ROME (AP) — Italian police descended yesterday upon Rome's Church of Christ, chiseled its name off a wall and took a news photographer of the Associated Press into custody for photographing them.

They vainly ordered an AP correspondent away from the scene.

The word "Christ," in six-inch-high letters, was the first word removed in this action against the Protestant religious organization, which has United States financial backing.

The police struck quietly after worshippers were forced to leave a Church of Christ in Leghorn late Friday night.

Detective Adventure Starts in Colonist Today

It is the second in a series of reprints of the sleuthing adventures of the world's most famous fictional detective by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, still rated as the greatest mystery writer ever. The first in the series, "A Scandal in Bohemia," concluded yesterday.

In "The Adventures of Wisteria Lodge" Sherlock Holmes manages—despite the local constabulary—to solve the murder of a would-be murderer. But not even he can catch the culprit.

Speak Your Mind on Party Lines

Week's Winner Brief, Anonymous

BY THE JUDGE

This week's winner really took The Judge at his word. He asked you to tell us about your party line "in 100 words or less." And Mrs. J. R. Horgan, East Sooke, took us up on the "or less" part—her winning letter [illegible] sentences long. As a matter of fact, it was exactly 25 words—a dollar a word! We've heard of lots of well-known authors who don't get paid that much.

Mrs. Horgan could almost qualify for the coming week's contest, because she was embarrassed at winning. "Ooh, my neighbors will murder me!" she exclaimed.

And just to protect Mrs. Horgan from irate party liners (her letter was signed with a nom-de-plume) we are not going to reprint it. You'll have to guess which of last week's letters was written by Mrs. Horgan.

Today's winner for the best letter from the day's mailbag gets $2 for being, without doubt, the most long-suffering telephoner on a party-line. The

Dear Judge,

Have you ever listened to a hockey broadcast via telephone?

Our party used to broadcast them regularly, presumably for the benefit of a shut-in friend.

ANOTHER READER.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

LESS than two years ago the people of British Columbia voted 60.7 per cent for the sale of wine and spirits by the glass. Vancouver Island as a whole voted 60 per cent for it. Victoria voted 55½ per cent for it.

Must we go through the whole dreary business again? Yes, if the drys have their way. They want to pour out more thousands of dollars of taxpayers' money, and subject us to several weeks more of trite and boresome propaganda, to reopen a question that was settled by a clear majority, 20 months ago.

If the drys get enough signatures on their petition, they can bring about another vote on the sale of wine and spirits by the glass.

The following is partly a personal opinion. The drys are free to tear it to bits if they can.

My suggestion to householders, for what it's worth, is this: Think twice before you sign a petition. Don't join the ranks of the people who will sign anything. When the little man brings the petition to your house, ask him why he wants another vote on the sale of wine and spirits by the glass. Make him prove his case—if he can.

Back in 1952, and earlier, the prohibitionists were firmly opposed to a plebiscite on wine and liquor. They fought like tigers against every attempt to put the question to the people.

"Let the legislature settle it," certain drys said at one point (knowing that the members of the legislature were afraid to make a move).

"Let's have a royal commission investigate the whole matter," they said another time, meaning (if you read between the lines) "Let's see if we can delay action for another 20 years."

Despite the clamor of the drys, a plebiscite was decided upon. The drys ran a noisy campaign, in which they urged people to "Vote No Until You Know."

"Vote against the sale of wine and liquor by the glass until you are told what kind of places they are going to sell it in," the drys said.

But the drys suffered a heavy defeat. The people voted "Yes," 316,266 to 204,761 in all B.C.; 61,506 to 40,278 on Vancouver Island; 4,356 to 3,711 in Oak Bay; 9,463 to 7,554 in Saanich; 6,141 to 3,011 in Esquimalt; 13,879 to 11,116 in Victoria.

The prohibitionists at once began issuing alibis for their defeat. "It was a vague, indefinite question," they said.

Was it really vague and indefinite? To refresh your memory, here are the exact words of the plebiscite that the people of B.C. voted on, June 12, 1952:

"Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous liquor and wine by the glass in establishments licensed for such purposes?"

The question could scarcely have been more definite and clear-cut. The people decided that they did want spirits and wine sold by the glass. The exact method by which wines and spirits should be sold by the glass was left up to the legislature. That's why we have a legislature—to make laws. Are the people asked their opinion on every detail of those laws? Certainly not.

"People voted yes, not because they wanted more liquor outlets, but because they wanted a change," said the drys, hinting that some of the yes-voters actually wanted tighter liquor laws.

If so, why did they vote for "spirituous liquor and wine by the glass?" I believe they voted for it because they wanted it.

"It wasn't a decisive enough majority," grumbled some of the drys. "A lot of people didn't vote."

Many governments have been elected on smaller majorities and smaller turnouts. And deciding who will govern us is even more important than deciding how we will drink.

The 1952 vote was on election day, and it was a lively election at that. If another vote is held between elections, the turnout will be much smaller, and the drys know it. They think they stand a better chance of winning, because there are more fanatics on their side.

The Stevens commission sat. The government made a new law, which gave the drys yet another chance. If they could raise enough signatures, another vote would be held in each licensing area. That's what the drys are trying to do now—gather signatures.

Why do they want another vote? "Now we know what kind of outlets we are going to get, and we should be able to say yes or no to them," the drys declare.

Well, the kind of outlets we are going to get are comparatively few and strictly regulated. A few bars, a few licensed restaurants. Liquor is least harmful when taken with food. This is a very mild, cautious liquor law.

What do we know now that we did not know in June, 1952? Practically nothing. Unless the new law had made it impossible to open a bar of any kind, we couldn't have had a milder law. So why do we need another vote? I contend that we don't need another vote.

Therefore I can see no reason why any person who wants more liberal liquor laws should sign the petition which the drys are now circulating.

Speak Your Mind on Party Lines

One Bad Apple Can Spoil Phoning

Dear Judge,

Hah! Party line? You should live in the country with eight on a line, where one person, like the single rotten apple in the barrel, can spoil the whole . . .

GANGES.

(Hah, you should live in the city, with eight on one line, etc.)

Dear Judge,

Party lines are like cars. They bring out the worst in people. People are human, if you don't treat them as vipers . . .

B. E. S. FORD,
Vancouver.

(Yes, but what about the real, genuine vipers The Judge has on his party line?)

Dear Judge,

The old phone, a bit higher on the wall than was comfortable to reach, cut down the long conversations.

MRS. JEAN REID.

(It's been a long, long time since The Judge could hoist himself on to tiptoe. What we need is a floor phone.)

Dear Judge,

. . . She came to my door but would not come in as she said she was too wet, but, glancing past me, she said, "I thought so."

She was looking at my telephone, which I had left tilted on its cradle . . .

CARELESS.

(And now phoneless?)

Dear Judge,

. . . He and another gentleman were talking on a party line, and he asked for the loan of $10. At this stage the other gentleman had a sudden attack of deafness . . . The operator, getting impatient, politely butted in and told the gentleman what was wanted.

The gentleman said, "If you can hear him, you lend it to him."

BOB PATTERSON,
436 Michigan.

Dear Judge,

. . . A friend and I were talking on the phone and a receiver on one of the party lines was lifted and a very English voice asked us what the time was. My friend told her, she hung up and we went back to our conversation.

DON HART,
182 Beach Drive.

(If it happens again, take the hint. It was subtle, but a hint nevertheless. She was pointing out, very nicely, that time was passing, and that she was hoping you and your friend might soon get off the party line. And that reminds us—it's time to hang up this question, and time to start remembering the day in your life when you were most embarrassed. "My Most Embarrassing Moment" should give us lots of laughs, and who knows—maybe it will bring you $25.)

Garden Notes

Brussels Sprouts Take Work in Clay

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Brussels sprouts on clay soil. R.S., Victoria.—The first essential for success with Brussels sprouts on your heavy clay soil, which certainly is not the best for this vegetable, is to dig in plenty of lightening material, such as partially decayed horse manure or half-rotted compost.

After digging, apply a dressing of a cupful of ground limestone per square yard, and let this be washed in by the rain. About two weeks before setting out the plants, apply half a cupful of superphosphate and one tablespoonful of sulphate of potash per square yard and rake it in. The plants should be set out 2½ feet apart. A good mulch of lawn clippings or sawdust applied around the plants will keep the soil from drying out and cracking.

Dwarf Shrubs for Shade—J.F.W., Oak Bay. Here are a few good shrubs under three feet in height which will thrive under light shade: Oregon grape (Mahonia aquifolium); butcher's broom (Ruscus aculeatus); St. John's Wort (Hypericum calycinum); periwinkle (Vinca minor) and the shrubby speedwell (Veronica radicans).

Laurustinus is also suitable, although in time it will grow higher than three feet. It can, however, be cut down practically to ground level when it becomes too tall.

Storing Lily Bulbs — J.D.S., Vancouver. The best place to store any lily bulb is in the soil, as these bulbs don't take kindly to dormant storage, like gladiolus or tulips. If you have to carry bulbs over until suitable planting weather, keep them in slightly moist peat moss to prevent the lily scales from shriveling. The ideal storage temperature is around 40 degrees.

Reducing height of yew tree—M.T., Victoria. The safest time to cut back your yews from 12 feet to eight feet would be May. To encourage young growth, it will be advisable to give the hedge a good mulch of rotted manure next summer.

Blue lace flower — F.L.V., Saanich. I think the flower you are looking for is Trachymene caerulea, which is often listed in seed catalogues either as Didiscus or as the blue lace flower. It is a very pretty annual, and quite easy to grow, making plants about two feet high, and giving a rounded head of bloom something like Queen Anne's Lace, but in the most beautiful light blue imaginable.

This flower is not particular as to soil, but blooms more freely when the plants are a bit crowded. Sow the seeds in April in a seed bed or row, and transplant when they are large enough to their flowering quarters.

Ashe, Baess Lead In Frostbite Races

Ned Ashe and Jorgen Baess were all tied up and well ahead of the rest of the fleet after the first two races of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club frostbite championships, sailed on Cadboro Bay yesterday afternoon. Each won one race and was second in the other.

Three more races will be sailed today, starting at 10:30 a.m., to complete the series.

Skippers were bothered by a light vague breeze. In the second race several boats were stuck for a considerable time trying to round a mark, and one was unable to finish. Course was patrolled by Jack Gann in his cruiser Seatime.

Complete results were:

First race—Ned Ashe, Jorgen Baess, Peter Young, Humphry Golby, Jack Lindsay, Tim Heiberg, Hamish Dunn, Jack Korning.

Second race—Jorgen Baess, Ned Ashe, Tim Heiberg, Hamish Dunn, Peter Young, Jack Korning, Humphry Golby, Jack Lindsay did not finish.

Elderly Man Found Dead

PORT ALBERNI—The body of a well-known Vancouver Island man was found beside the Island Highway near Cameron Lake on Friday and brought here for burial.

George Hannay, elderly resident of Cameron Lake district, is presumed to have died of a heart attack while waiting for a bus bound for Nanaimo.

Mr. Hannay had lived for some years on the shore of Cameron Lake and was a former resident of Nanaimo. He had prospected in many areas on Vancouver Island.

HEARING-AID OF THE WEEK

BY B. S. H. TYE

"To Hear Again Is To Live Again"

The above has been our slogan ever since we started business in 1938 and, because hearing aids make so much difference in people's daily lives, we have never had reason to change it.

As A. C. Furstenberg, M.D., Dean of the University of Michigan Medical School, said: "If the patient is unable to hear conversational voice and is thereby incapacitated for his daily business and social relationships, a Hearing-Aid should be recommended."

You are welcome to test the latest All-Transistor hearing-aids and, if you wish, arrange to take one out on trial for a few days before purchase, at the offices of the Victoria Hearing Aid Co., at 326 Yarrow Bldg., 625 Fort St., Victoria, B.C.

Margaret Martin Wins Best Actress Award

BY RAY BAINES

Margaret Martin, 25-year-old St. Luke's Players' regular, has won the E. G. Hamber "best actress" award in the B.C. Reginal Drama Festival.

The prized scroll was handed to Miss Martin last night by adjudicator Graham Suter for her performance in St. Luke's "High Ground."

TRAIL WINS

The local entry itself failed to show. The $100 Calvert cash prize and trophy went to the Trail Little Theatre for its performance last week of F. Hugh Herbert's "For Love or Money."

Mr. Suter called Miss Martin's portrayal of the little Scottish nun, Sister Josephine, "utterly delightful."

Best actor award went to Chris Wiggins of the Trail group and the Peter Scott Memorial Trophy for best supporting player was given to Gwyneth Harris for her work in the Kelowna Little Theatre's "Ah, Wilderness."

The Scott trophy has been held for the past year by Carol MacCormac of St. Luke's who won it in Vancouver in the 1953 festival.

TROPHIES TAKEN

The Christine Chanter Memorial Trophy for the best director went to Janie Stevenson, who directed the winning Trail group. The smelter town players also picked up the Henry Birks Trophy for the best visual production for what Mr. Suter called their "very brilliant set."

In his remarks about last night's St. Luke's performance, Mr. Suter said the choice of play put them at a disadvantage.

He considered "High Ground," a whodunit set in a convent, "thin, poor material." He said the group was at "a bit of a disadvantage" by choosing a play "which is not remarkably good."

DIFFICULT JOB

He said his dislike of the play in no way affected his judgment of the performance, but it made the players' job that much more difficult.

He praised the "meticulous attention to detail" in the presentation but criticized parts of the performance which he said went flat. He also drew attention to what he called "a very ragged" final scene. He gave a brief summary of each performance, most of which he found "sincere" but not always convincing.

He said the director, Flora Nicholson, rightly handled the play as a better-class whodunit but failed at times to get the most out of it.

BRAVE ATTEMPT

It was, he said, "a brave, careful attempt—a faithful and sincere attempt"—but it failed to achieve the best qualities of good theatre.

Mr. Suter in making the awards, emphasized that their importance must not be emphasized too much.

"The really important thing is achievement," he said. He said he was pleased by the "enthusiasm, standard and effort" of the three B.C. entries.

AWARDS PRESENTED

Fourth Arrest Made In Baby Sale Racket

MONTREAL (CP)—A second lawyer was charged yesterday in connection with what police describe as a multi-million-dollar international racket in babies.

Louis Glazer, 51, was the fourth person taken into custody since the case broke Friday. He was released on bail of $950 and will face five charges at preliminary hearing February 19.

Two women, one reported to be a maternity home operator and the other a "recruiter" of unwed mothers, were first arrested. They were held pending consideration of charges against them, it was learned.

BABY PURCHASED

Police said the women were arrested at the maternity home, where detective Therese Bogatta of the New York police department "purchased" a baby. The baby now is being cared for by provincial authorities. Names of the women were not released.

Glazer is alleged to have been on the premises of the maternity home at the time of the purchase. He pleaded not guilty to two counts of conspiracy in connection with birth registrations, two counts of falsification and forgery, and one count of uttering.

Earlier, Herman Buller, 38, also a Montreal lawyer, was arrested at nearby Dorval airport as he, his wife and her parents prepared to board a plane for Israel.

CHARGES LAID

He was charged with falsifying entries in a birth certificate, and of giving advice in connection with an indictable offense. He pleaded not guilty and was released on $2,000 bail for preliminary hearing February 19.

Sgt. Hilda Beaucage of the Montreal police department assisted the female detective from New York in her preparations for the purchase, a police spokesman said. The negotiations had taken some days.

Officials said $3,500 changed hands in the deal and that a birth certificate, reported falsified, was provided. In the raid, the police were said to have recovered the marked money and to have taken custody of the baby.

Death Ends Career

MISS AGNES MACPHAIL

First Woman In Commons Dead at 63

TORONTO (BUP) — Agnes Campbell Macphail, white-haired former school teacher who turned politician and scored several notable "firsts" for women, died in a hospital yesterday of heart disease. She was 63.

She was the first woman ever to serve in the Canadian parliament, Canada's first woman delegate to the League of Nations, and the first woman to serve in the Ontario Legislature.

She once wrote that while she didn't want to be a man, she wanted to be treated like one.

"As it is," she said, "a woman is regarded as a second-rate substitute for a man. The dice are loaded for half the population. The men want to hog everything."

Despite the odds, Miss Macphail managed to have a successful 30-year career in public life, and showed that she could hold her own with the opposite sex.

QUICK COMEBACK

Once wen she was addressing a political meeting, a man in the audience shouted, "don't you wish you were a man?" Miss Macphail said she "annihilated" him with the squelcher, "Yes, don't you?"

French Thrust At Rebels

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP)—French forces jabbed new probing thrusts from Dien Phu yesterday in what may be an attempt to force a showdown with 36,000 Vietminh who have hemmed the big northwest bastion for nearly three months.

A union spokesman said the French are using more than 4,000 men in "strong reconnaissances" against the Communist-led rebels. He said there have been "losses on both sides," but no major battle had shaped up yet.

Meanwhile, the last of the 200 American aviation technicians recently promised by President Eisenhower to help keep planes flying against the Communists have arrived in Indo-China, it was reported at Hanoi.

Their arrival brought to more than 300 the number of American ground crew experts "loaned" to the French for the war against Communism here.

At Washington official sources indicated the United Nations command in Korea will turn down the surprise offer of South Korean President Syngman Rhee to send a division of troops to Indo-China to battle the Communists.

Officially, the South Korean offer is still "under consideration." But it was abundantly clear that high American policy-makers took a cool view of it.

One informant predicted that UN command will soon send Rhee a polite message saying, in effect, "thank you, but your troops are needed in Korea."

South Korea also proposed that Gen. James A. Van Fleet, former U.S. army commander in Korea, be sent to Indo-China, to help train and organize native resistance forces.

NEWS REVIEW

Scout headquarters in London has ruled that a Communist may not be a Scout in Britain. Commenting on the case of a 19-year-old Queen's Scout who is also district secretary of a Young Communist League, headquarters says a Communist can not sincerely comply with the Scout code. The youth, who refused to resign, quotes the fourth law of the movement, "A Scout is a friend to all and a brother to every other Scout, no matter to what country, class or creed the other may belong."

Use of Atom Asked For U.S. Industry

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP)—President Eisenhower will ask Congress next week to give American private industry permission to develop atomic energy for peaceful purposes, and authorize limited exchange of atomic information with U.S. allies.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, told newspapermen about Eisenhower's plans for a special message to Congress on atomic energy. The day it will go to the capitol next week has not been fixed.

TWO SECTIONS

Hagerty said the message will be in two main sections.

One, he added, will outline suggested legislation designed to "encourage peacetime use of atomic energy in this country by private enterprise." Under the law at present the government has a monopoly on atomic power production, so the change Eisenhower has in mind, would herald a new era.

The other section of the Eisenhower message will call for legislative action on proposals he has made in the past that the government be authorized to exchange tactical information about atomic weapons with America's allies.

Stormy Meeting Discusses PGE

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 600 persons attended a stormy meeting here Friday night to discuss proposed extension of the PGE Railway through West Vancouver.

Main speakers Reeve Hugo Ray and Gordon Gibson, Liberal member of the legislature for Lillooet, led the attack on the Social Credit government policy and accused Premier Bennett of trying to "bulldoze the issue through."

George Tomlinson, Social Credit member for North Vancouver, slated to speak for the government policy, was unable to attend at the last minute and no substitute speaker appeared.

In Vancouver, J. A. Kennedy, former general manager of the PGE, said Friday night the proposed Squamish-Vancouver extension of the line was needed to tap northern British Columbia riches.

He told a meeting of the Dunbar Liberal Association that the extension would allow northern produce to reach markets and at the same time open up northern B.C. for development.

He said that 95 per cent of the business transacted in Prince George is done through Edmonton. "We can't sit back and see that going on."

The 137 mills along the PGE are handicapped by lack of fast transportation — and the 224 mills in the Prince George district can not export because of the lack of a final link to Vancouver.

"All this business is going to Edmonton," he added.

He said British Columbia's greatest need is a north-south railway. At present it is the only province in Canada which lacks a railway running into the rapidly-expanding country to the north.

Youth Admits Retaining Stolen Cash

VANCOUVER (CP)—Barrie Simpson, 18, pleaded guilty in Vancouver police court yesterday to retaining part of more of $100 alleged to have been stolen from the home of Dr. Joseph Blumes during a baby-sitting party. He was remanded to Wednesday for sentence.

The youth said he was not at the party and that he had been given $100 by another boy. Police have recovered a total of $250.

Three juveniles have been charged with theft of the money.

City prosecutor Stewart McMorran told the court three boys were entertained at Dr. Blumes' home by a 16-year-old baby-sitter while the family was out for the evening Friday night.

The boys are alleged to have gone upstairs and to have taken $525 from a purse left in a closet by Mrs. Blumes. Two metal banks containing about $75 and a wallet containing $23 also were stolen.

After the Chopping, a Boomerang

Queen's Parasol Parries Flying Wood

WAGGA WAGGA, Australia —More than 100 persons fainted in the heat Saturday as a crowd of nearly 10,000 turned out to welcome Queen Elizabeth and the Duke o fEdinburgh.

The parasol the Queen carried to protect her from the sun came in handy during a log-chopping contest at the fairgrounds. A large chip sailed toward her as an axeman chopped furiously.

The Queen ducked and deftly warded off the piece of wood with her parasol as the Duke laughed loudly.

At the fairgrounds, Queen Elizabeth became the first reigning monarch of Britain to meet an aborigine. Joe Timbery was presented to the Queen after displaying his skill with the boomerang. The native gave the Queen a large boomerang for herself and two smaller ones for her children, Prince Charles and Princess Anne.

At Canberra, Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh were welcomed yesterday by the greatest number of people ever to throng the streets of this Australian federal capital.

Canberra's population doubled overnight from 30,000 to 60,000.

Governor-General Sir William Slim and Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies greeted the Royal pair at the plane which had brought them from Wagga Wagga.

They will spend five days here. The Queen will open the new session of parliament Monday.

There will be almost a mile of red carpet for the Queen to step on, including 1,344 yards leading up the steps of parliament.

Yesterday's fashionably dressed crowd was silent by comparison with the noisy greetings of the New South Wales towns. The shouts came mostly from the children.

A light breezez took the edge off the heat. The Queen looked cool and composed.

Canberra, one of the few planned cities in the world, was at its best. By contrast with the sunbaked plains the Queen has seen in the past few days, groves of pines and other imported trees provided green freshness.

Nickel Still Good On Maine Line

NEW YORK (AP)—Got a nickel? Want to go somewhere? You still can— provided you want to travel from Biddeford, Me., to Saco, Me., or even vice versa.

The nickel fare is a memory in most cities. Transit companies tell you, and offer statistics if you question them, that operating costs are way up younder.

"The only one left in the country," says president J. Burton Stride.

It started 67 years ago with two horses, open-car, four-wheeled conveyances. In 1891 it changed to electric trams, and in 1939 to buses.

But all that time it has stayed loyal to the lowly nickel.

The transit line's customers along its 20-mile roule are mainly textile workers from the plants of Bates, Pepperell and Saco-Lowell.

President Stride says his employees have wage scale comparable to those of the larger transport lines. He gives a lot of credit to the use of modern equipment which keeps operating costs down. The company has only two working executives and one secretary.

Oddities

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP)—A mother of 10 children—who is expecting another—filed suit Saturday for divorce from her husband, alleging he was "cold and indifferent."

The mother, Mrs. Clara Robbins, also charged her husband, Ralph Robbins, stayed out late at night, and once hit her in the face with a dish of cream.

DENVER (AP)—Asked to give a word of advice to the younger generation, Mrs. Bertha Nester replied:

"Don't ever live to the 100."

Mrs. Nester plans to disregard her own advice, however. She'll hit the century mark Monday.

Canada To Increase Flow Of Italian Immigrants

ROME (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent promised Italy yesterday that immigration of Italians to Canada will be increased as much as possible. He made this promise to Premier Scelba of Italy at a state dinner held here in honor of the Canadian prime minister who is making a three-day visit to Italy.

Premier Scelba said he hoped his country and Canada will work to closer co-operation in an economic and social field. Mr. St. Laurent replied that both Canadians and Italians ask only to live and let live. He said there couldn't be a better foundation for co-operation between the two countries.

REFERS TO PARLEY

Earlier in the day the Canadian prime minister spoke of the conference of Big Four foreign ministers in Berlin. He stated that Russia's conduct at the conference makes it obvious that the West must maintain and improve its alliance.

He stressed that if western nations really want peace, they must be ready to undertake war to protect it. He said the western nations would go to war if any member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were attacked.

The Canadian prime ministers and Italian Foreign Minister Attilio Piccioni signed a cultural agreement between the two countries which established a $500,000 dollar foundation for an exchange of scholarships.

The annual interest of about $25,000 will be used in Italy for Canadian cultural activities including scholarships and fellowships for Canadians doing research or studying in Italy.

GOVERNMENT BONDS

The $500,000 will be in Italian government bonds with an interest rate of five per cent. This payment is in accordance with a previous settlement concerning Canadian funds in Italy which cannot be taken from the country due to currency restrictions.

The agreement gives the Italian government the right to maintain at its own expense an Italian cultural institute in Montreal with generally similar aims to the Canadian foundation to be established in Rome.

EGGS

When beating eggs, if a pinch of salt is added, the work will be accomplished in far less time than ordinarily.

Marines Reviewing Germ Confessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Marine Corps will try this week to determine whether Communist cruelty is sufficient cause to excuse an American prisoner of war for making false confessions of germ warfare.

The question will be reviewed by a court of inquiry composed of four Marine generals and one navy medical admiral. They have been ordered to look into the case of Col. Frank H. Schwable, the highest-ranking Marine captured in Korea.

Schwable was one of two Marine officers and 33 air force officers and enlisted men who were forced by their captors to concoct stories about the United States using bacteriological warfare.

The air force is handling its confession cases differently. An air force board has been set up to evaluate the facts already gathered in private investigations and no action or decision will be taken until the investigating board, meeting in secret, completes its studies.

The inquiry court will open at Marine Corps headquarters here Tuesday morning.

A court of inquiry operates in a manner similar to a formal court martial, but Colonel Schwable will be present as a "party to the inquiry," not a defendant, because no charges have been lodged against him.

A fool for a patient

It has been said that he who treats his own illness has a fool for a patient. The wisdom is obvious. What may seem to be an insignificant ailment actually may be a warning of serious illness, especially if symptoms persist or recur. Only a physician has the ability and knowledge required to diagnose and prescribe medical treatment. Seek his attention at the first warning signal. A prolonged and serious illness may be thwarted. If medication is needed, bring your prescription to us.

Freedom of Speech

ANYONE in doubt about the origin of freedom of speech in British lands could not do better than read the recent work by Sir Philip Gibbs, "A Journalist's London." Knighted for his fine services during a long and brilliant career, Sir Philip after his retirement wrote this book which discusses the slow growth of British liberties, widening from precedent to precedent to the incomparable institution of the Queen-in-Parliament as we know and enjoy it today. He traces the London riots of the Seventeenth Century, the long battle between Parliament and the pamphleteers, and the eventual victory through public opinion for the open-face method of doing public business over the cloistered and repressed.

Dr. Samuel Johnson, Sir Philip shows, was eminent among those whose long and bitter struggle opened the galleries of Parliament to the public and brought its reports to the journals of the day. Upwards of 150 years ago the battle for freedom of the press was won conclusively. Parliament, faced with openly angry public opinion and under a galling fire from the hidden pamphleteers—some of whom were none too scrupulous—gave in. To save its face it preserved on the records the injunction which stands there today—that none save those of whom Mr. Speaker would approve might presume to report the doings of the assembly. "Mr. Speaker," to his full honor and credit, has been approving of long generations of free and intelligent press galleries ever since.

Discussing academic freedom in Canadian universities recently Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, put today's concept of free thought and speech into the following terms: "Canadians are participants in the British tradition of liberty with its undergirding of personal and civic responsibility. The concept of guilt by association, the technique of the smear, and the methods of the informer, the agent provocateur or the witch-hunter, are foreign to the liberty we cherish."

There is the balanced view. Just as important as liberty of the mind and freedom of utterance are the responsibilities, individual and collective, which safeguard them. One side of the equation would be meaningless without the other. The best safeguard, the steadying influence which will always keep such liberties from going far enough astray to become license, is public opinion when it is well informed. Most Canadians have these values right side up in their minds, and any momentary transgression against them meets with a swift and determined response. Most Canadians also are conscious of the responsibilities which safeguard the democratic system and preserve our way of life.

Airmen Take Over

AT least one change will mark the opening ceremonies of the Legislature on Tuesday when the RCAF mounts the honor guard. This is a privilege perhaps long deferred and one that has been well earned by the junior service. Hitherto the honor of supplying this guard has fallen to army or naval contingents and it is axiomatic that the turnout is exemplary among these veterans of ceremonious military occasions. If will be equally so when the airmen take over this duty.

One is apt to think of airmen as people who fly and seldom do anything else, forgetting that of necessity a large number of them are earthbound like their colleagues of the army. Even those whose familiar sphere is the sky have first of all undergone the rigors of the parade ground, while their maintenance crew and administrative comrades do their daily share of universal barrack square training. In point of fact the RCAF has frequently opened many eyes with the precision and smart bearing of its drill squads.

The arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor at the Legislative Buildings on such occasions and his inspection of the guard of honor is one facet of the traditional pageantry that accompanies such an occasion. It is always an interesting and colorful moment when the guard gives the salute and His Honor acknowledges the compliment. On Tuesday, fittingly enough, the RCAF guard will act in concert with the RCAF band from the Western Command at Edmonton. For a brief space it will be an air force show, and a welcome and pleasing sight it promises to be.

The New Poverty

IT is always hard to define the dividing line between material well-being and poverty, and any attempt to do so must be related to the times and conditions in which one lives. With the ever-increasing pace of scientific discovery and industrial production concepts of what constitutes poverty must be constantly revised. The novelties and luxuries possession of which distinguished the well-to-do of yesterday become the "necessities" of today. Where once to be poor meant to be hungry and tattered, nowadays it would be difficult to say exactly what the term does imply in relation to human circumstances.

Not long ago the television industry startled the United States by embarking on a sales promotion campaign to encourage the children of TV-less homes to regard themselves as under-privileged and to shame their parents into keeping up with the Joneses. Perhaps the industry wasn't so far out after all, for now along comes a distinguished British newspaper with a comment on much the same lines. The newspaper in question is The Spectator, which could scarcely be described as a journal of the so-called "downtrodden masses." Apropos of parking meters, it terms them undemocratic devices for this reason:

"A moment's thought will show that the parking meter enables the rich man's Austin to monopolize the parking space which morally belongs to the vans which provide service facilities for the television sets, refrigerators and electric cookers of the poor."

If these are the new poor then the lot of many of us must appear sad indeed—though so far as absence of TV from the living room is concerned, not yet unendurable.

CNR GAS CAR

Sir,—I am a retired Canadian National locomotive engineer and have just received the CN magazine. On page 38 is a photo of the old gas-car that I have run a good many times. I beg to state most emphatically that I did not run to Port Alberni. We went out Sooke way and only 95 miles, at that time, out of Victoria.

I will be surprised if you have not had this brought to your attention after it appeared in your paper. I might say the passenger service and mail contract made it pay well.

FRANK MINEAU,

COUNTING BLESSINGS

Sir,—This letter has been written mentally for a long time. It is to say many thanks to so many of our grand "public workers," the paper carrier, bus drivers, milkman and mailman I mention from direct personal contact. Our paper, the Colonist, is delivered regularly and placed in shelter when necessary, and we receive the same fine service from milkman and mailman in all kinds of weather.

I travel often on the bus, and find the drivers most cheerful and kind, and I do appreciate their skill in handling the large bus, collecting fares, and giving change, and smilingly checking patrons on and off the bus. I go to a store lunch counter when in town and find the food good, and the girls serving there a most happy lot. They are most obliging and courteous no matter how busy they are.

There are so many "doing their duty, the daily round, the common task," the men delivering wood and coal, the city engineer department keeping all in good sanitary condition, our alert firemen and policemen, and hosts of others to whom most grateful thanks are due. Thinking along those lines makes me remember the hymn "Count your blessings, name them one by one."

(Mrs.) M. HOPE,

CHOICE OF A BOARD

Sir,—Would it not be a far-sighted and desirable thing to set a level of qualifications as a measurement of eligibility to our library board?

On the face of it to date there is a paucity of even intelligent approach as to "who" is qualified to make any authoritative pronouncements and an evidence of complete breakdown.

Our library employees must have, and are accepted upon their qualifications.

With the exception of a council representative to watch over and control the financial aspect, the rest of the board in my humble opinion, should be of high intellectual calibre. Such members could at once establish an intelligent relationship with librarian and their assistants.

Sir,—Communistic literature should be banned throughout Canada.

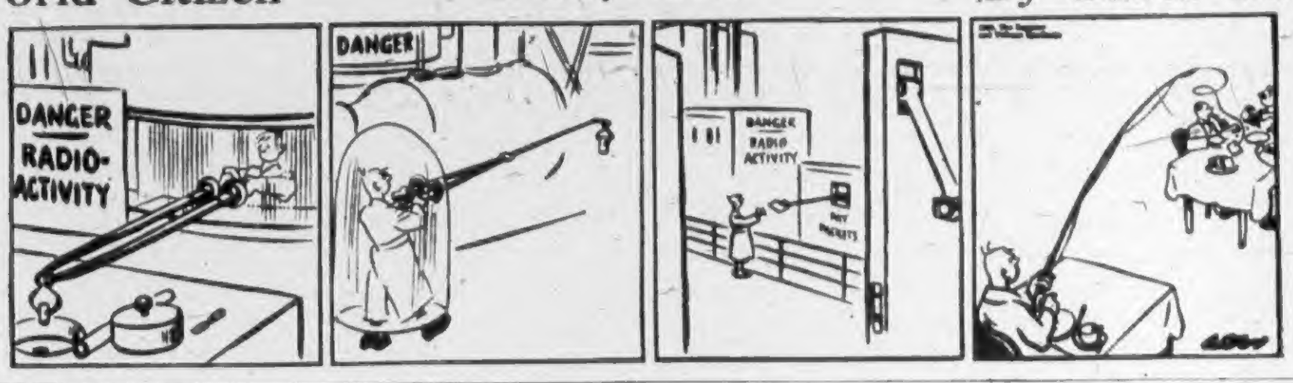

Readers should be confined to educational features like Rex Morgan, Mary Worth, Lil' Abner and similar material pertaining to our enlightened way of life.

Perils of Science

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings"

By TOM TAYLOR

ONE or two correspondents have had a word to say about the pre-meal Grace, about which I thought aloud recently. One lady tells me she never enjoys her food if she doesn't say Grace, but she assures me she doesn't mumble her words.

I'm sure she doesn't, although as I said before, some people do.

(Incidentally, and akin to this subject, I notice that in Montreal an Anglican bishop is taking steps to stop gabbling of the Lord's Prayer, meaning to rattle it off without thinking.)

A man of the cloth quotes to me a story his mother used to tell. Invited to say Grace, and being ravenously hungry, the famous Rabbie declared, quite reverently:

To Gawd Be Praise
I ne'er was hungrier a' ma days.

However his host turned out to be more gentile than generous. When asked to return Thanks after Meat, the Bard spoke honestly:

Glory noo and Glory then
I am no a bit fu'er than when I began.

("Then" is pronounced to rhyme with "began." The pastor always understood the first line to mean "Glory now and evermore.")

* * *

In his brevity Burns was in the tradition of the Elizabethan poet and courtier who affirmed:

Long graces do
But keep good stomachs off, that would fall to.

A Campbell River man recites me a story from his scrapbook, to wit:

At a dinner of the Vaudeville Golfers Society in London, when the chairman was Ted Ray, well-known stage and radio comedian, the toastmaster rapped with his gavel for Mr. Ray to say Grace. For once forgetting his microphone technique Ray mumbled so badly he was inaudible, whereupon the toastmaster stepped forward: "Speak up, Sir, your guests cannot hear you."

"Mind your own business," retorted Ray, "I'm not talking to them anyway."

This toastmaster apparently, John Mills, was a character himself, having been known to announce 900 guests in one hour. Once he caused a stir by rebuking Marlene Dietrich and others for lighting cigarettes before the loyal Toast.

Like many a Grace, this particular toast is rushed through as quickly as a chairman can decently pledge it. Not for want of deference as for fear lest someone breaks the rule. At any dinner function you can usually see some fast diner looking longingly at the chairman, hoping he'll hurry up and propose "The Queen."

Now that this time-honored pledge is once more to a lady it's interesting to note it was a lady, and one having a bath at that, who gave it birth.

Centuries ago, you see, a piece of toasted bread was put in the wine cup before drinking to improve the flavor. As per this injunction in verse by a wit when instructing his servant to contrive him a cup:

Make it so large, that filled with sack
Up to the swelling brim,
Vast toasts, on the delicious
lake,
Like ships at sea may swim.

Well, one day when bathing at Bath was a social occasion and ladies dressed in elegant attire for their immersions, an admirer of a celebrated beauty took a glass of the water in which she stood and pledged her health. Whereupon another admirer, half fuddled, offered to jump in swearing that though he liked not the liquor he would have the toast.

Thereafter it became the fashion to toast a beautiful woman by drinking her health, and later the health of any person or to any idea or sentiment.

Almost sad then is the drop to banality when two males raise their glasses and all they can think to say is — "Cheers."

By-Passing Victoria

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

WHY does practically all traffic from the upper part of Vancouver Island gravitate to Vancouver, instead of continuing down the Island Highway to Victoria? This, it seems, is a situation we can do little about, but it was again brought into focus by a city business man and reserve army officer who allegedly discovered that air force personnel stationed at Comox, on a ratio of 100 to 1, prefer spending their leave on the mainland.

The bare statement was bad enough. Supported by disparaging comparisons between the two cities from the viewpoint of leave centres, said to have been expressed by the airmen themselves, it annoyed a few Victorians, many of whom are always only too glad to throw their homes open to visiting servicemen. However, Sqdn.-Ldr. Campbell promptly took issue with the statements, and in a few well-chosen words soothed the hurt citizens' feelings.

Had the subject been handled a little more diplomatically in the first place and the Comox boys told what a nice place Victoria is and how welcome they would be if they visited us, much of the ensuing unpleasantness might have been avoided. It might not be too late yet to induce them to spend their leave here. Our publicity bureau spends city funds influencing tourists from below the border to visit us; why not a little effort on someone's part in "selling Victoria" as a vacation spot for our Canadian lads? If this were approached in the right manner, we might be agreeably surprised to find the boys in air force blue all for it.

It should be remembered that the majority come from the prairies and back east, and to reach Comox have to stop at Vancouver. There they usually spend several days or weeks, and during this period not only make new friends but also become acquainted with that city and its environments. When their first leave rolls round, isn't it only natural for them to want to spend it with their new acquaintances and in a city they know? Had they been given the same opportunity of spending a few days in Victoria, many would likely make straight back here at the first opportunity.

It has long been established that the majority of people living north of Nanaimo, including the Alberni and the West Coast, whether pleasure bent or on business, cross over to Vancouver from Nanaimo and seldom see Victoria. But there must be many good reasons for them doing so, not necessarily always due to any preference between the two cities. In analyzing these reasons we should keep in mind two facts: that Vancouver is the larger city and the trend the world over is for travel to be drawn towards the larger centres of population. But in this instance economical and geographical considerations are undoubtedly additional determining factors.

Fifty years ago the situation was the reverse. A few of the older warehouses still standing on Wharf and lower Yates Street remind us of the days when Victoria wholesale houses not only supplied the whole of the Island, but practically the entire coastal population of B.C. and the Yukon. At that time practically all supplies and passenger travel for all coastal points passed through Victoria. But times have changed all that and "wholesale row" is now located in downtown Vancouver.

When the population of most up-Island centres numbered only a few hundred and hardly one family in 10 owned a car, Victoria enjoyed its full share of their patronage; but not now. The few logging camps then existing have since developed into major operations and dozens of others have opened up; huge industrial plants have been built on both sides of the Island and new towns sprung up overnight. This phenomenal development has added thousands of new families to the up-Island population, with the majority originating from the mainland, where the big lumber companies have their head offices, do all their hiring and purchase their supplies. The same applies to the larger fishing companies, which overhaul and fit out their boats either at Vancouver or New Westminster and hire the crews there.

Influenced by all this, travel between the Island and the mainland has correspondingly increased. Geography also has entered the picture. A look at any map and one word tells the story: distance. In other words, the shortest route prevails—Nanaimo to Vancouver, only 41 miles. The result is that most of this travel now passes through Nanaimo and men going to their Island jobs and their families to their new homes never see Victoria. Then when they "go to town" it's to Vancouver or other mainland point from which they originally came, to visit friends and relations, transact business or enjoy themselves generally in a city they are already acquainted with. So it is also with the thousands of single loggers and fishermen who spend a considerable part of the winter in the cities. They, too, usually head for Vancouver for the same reasons.

Another factor responsible for the trend is our modern methods of transportation. Most people now own cars, want to take their cars with them, and ferries are built purposely to carry them. Whether it be businessman or loger, if a man wants to get from Campbell River to Vancouver by traveling via Nanaimo instead of Victoria he can be there in a few hours, and that just sums up a situation about which unfortunately we can do little.

Victoria in Beard and Crinoline

By G. E. MORTIMORE

THE "private eye" was an unknown figure in 1867. Sherlock Holmes, who had already made a name for himself in the pages of Fiction, would have scorned the title.

But Victoria had an Indian who professed to be a "private nose." He was a medicine man, and he said he could literally sniff out hidden money and goods.

The loot in question was $4,000 worth of gold and silver coins, bank notes, jewelry and watches that had been stolen from one Mrs. Copperman, the proprietor of an Indian trading depot on Store Street.

"On Monday afternoon some 200 Songish Indians, led by one of their tribe—a noted medicine man named 'Squash,' started on a hunt for Mrs. Copperman's $4,000, which Squash declared was buried somewhere between Fox's brickyard and Mr. Finlayson's residence.

"Several whites—inspired with a desire to divide the reward—joined in the search and followed the seer through bush and bramble, and seas of mud, until he made a halt at a post hole, and, after drawing four or five breaths, declared that the money had been buried there but that it had been recently removed.

"The fellow then took a zigzag course for Mr. Finlayson's mill, stopping occasionally to snuff, until he suddenly prostrated himself in a puddle of mud, into which he commenced to dig with his hands, snuffing like a dog and howling like a demon the meanwhile.

"The digging was aided by the hands of the avaricious whites—a shovel not being considered orthodox—and after a depth of three or four feet had been obtained and nothing found, the medicine man professed to have a fresh revelation, and, followed by his savage friends, started at full speed across the lots for the village, leaving the mud-bespattered Christians to return to town highly disgusted with the manner in which they had been humbugged.

"We saw 'Squash' yesterday morning. He was quite lame; he said that the presence of the white men destroyed the scent, and that he cut his foot on a broken bottle, which accounted for his sudden abandonment of the search."

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

PEOPLE who won't take no for an answer have been coming in for a little abuse recently at the hands of the temperance people. There have been several newspaper items about it, and I lately heard a temperance advocate on the air warning us innocent souls about these hearty charters, with a glass of grog proffered in their hands, refusing boisterously to take no for an answer.

It isn't the jovial, boisterous ones I mind. I can handle them. It is the soft, gentle, meek and mild ones that won't take no for an answer whom I fear. They beat me every time.

They are as a rule good people, and by good I mean good. It is impossible to imagine them with a glass of grog in hand. They are often so mild and gentle as to be almost delicate. They could be a maiden aunt, or the convener of the entertainment committee of some worthy cause; they can be old school chums, or a friend of your mother's who wants to sell you two tickets to a concert; they can be perfect strangers, but with so mild and harmless an approach that before you know it, you feel like a cat that has inadvertently stepped on the flypaper.

A good round No is a handsome and easy thing to utter. It comes, as you can see by saying it, from the chest. The word Yes can't come from the chest. It is a little, weak, jaw-word, a pitiable sound manipulated between your chin and your teeth. No has only one sound, really. Yes has a dozen or even 40 different sounds. No is a noble word. Yes is a creepy, hissing reptilian word.

To say No is a good deal easier than saying Yes. I think it must be a great deal older than Yes. Back in the cave-man days, I bet the word No was one of our first inventions. It comes far more naturally to our mouths than the newer word.

But as we grew more civilized, we began to produce a type of person, who certainly wasn't there in the cave with us, who is meek and mild and won't take No for an answer.

We cave men are helpless before them.

TESTIMONIAL

People who complain about officialese English used by some government offices should feel cheered by comparing it to the style prevailing among the high-ups in the Gold Coast colony, where the British are running an experiment in native self-rule. Here are passages from a business letter of a firm in Accra:

"Protuberant attention of yours is therefore drawn or today carved to the effect that we became your staunch contractors of supplies of boards, slipboards, woods or logs, etc., with quotations delivery before cash [illegible] upon the fact that all efforts will be engineered by us to fulfil our contracts with you with no delay whatsoever.

"Under the circumstance, having guaranteed the purity of business acumen and general stability to expeditiously carry out all stipulations conscientiously, we should esteem it a great favor, if you would recommend us to any of your affiliated company, or companies as well."

B.C. Actors Win Festival Roles

BY MAURY GWYNNE

Two British Columbia actors, known to Victoria theatre audiences, have been chosen to play roles in the Stratford Shakespearean Festival this summer.

Charles Allen, property man and actor on the Totem Theatre cast, is the only Victoria resident actor to be chosen for the festival to date.

POPULAR ROLE

Derek will be remembered here for his performance of the philosophical tramp in "The Silver Whistle," one of the last plays produced by the York company.

Both actors have been instructed to appear in Stratford, Ont., to begin work in the festival, by the end of May.

One of the world's finest actors, James Mason, has been chosen to star in the festival. He will hold the same place that British actor Alec Guinness had last summer.

The festival opens in the big tent theatre in Stratford on June 28, and runs for eight weeks, closing on August 21.

During the festival weeks, three Shakespearean plays will be performed 60 times at evening and matinee performances. This year's plays are "Measure for Measure," "The Taming of the Shrew," and "Oedipus."

Included in the festival this year will be a theatrical exhibition. It will include stage designs from England, Japan, Italy, Greece and Germany.

Organizer of the exhibition is Richard Southern, English theatrical historian, who has done much research in theatre and stage design.

ALMOST COMPLETE

Cecil Clarke, artistic director of the Stratford festival, says the exhibit is about complete and ready for shipment to Canada.

Meanwhile, plans for an American Shakespearean festival at Stratford, Conn., have been announced by the American Shakespearean Theatre and Academy.

Interest in a U.S. festival devoted to Shakespeare's work was aroused last year by the success of the Canadian festival.

Lawrence Langner, treasurer of the American group, said the Rockefeller Foundation has provided a grant up to $200,000 toward the cost of establishing a theatre and academy for the production of Shakespearean plays and training of actors.

It is planned to have the festival open in June and run for 10 weeks, on much the same lines as the Canadian festival.

TENOR COMING

On February 22, Richard Tucker, the leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing at the Royal Theatre.

Mr. Tucker is regarded as something of a phenomena by American music critics.

He sings the lead parts, reserved in the world of opera for an "Italian tenor." But his closest association with Italy has been in restaurants where spaghetti is served.

Born in Brooklyn, New York of Jewish parents, he started singing in a synagogue and is still a cantor in the synagogue near his New York home.

He made his debut with the Metropolitan in January of 1945 in the role of Enzo in "La Gioconda." Two years later he went to Italy to sing in the Arena in Verona where he was hailed as "the finest lyric tenor since Gill."

He returned to the U.S. in 1949 to sing with Toscanini in a now historic series of broadcasts by the NBC Symphony.

Tickets for the one-night performance of Tucker here can be obtained from Fletcher's box office, Douglas Street.

A record number of entries have been received for the Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, opening on March 15 for five days at Victoria High School.

Ten high schools, two junior high schools and 16 elementary schools will participate.

Adjudicator for the festival will be Sidney Risk of Vancouver.

Monday night, the Victoria Theatre Guild opens its five-day showing of the English mystery play, "Pink String and Sealing Wax," at Langham Court.

Under direction of Bruce Banyard, the players are: Ken Bostock, Cynthia Ross, Margaret McDowell, Judy MacCormac, Doreen Curtiss, Dick Pugh, Marjory Gilbert, Robin Richie and Jack Rowe.

At the Totem Theatre, "The Happy Time," starring 14-year-old Barry Smith of Vancouver and Peter Mannering, will go on for another week.

Producers Thor Arngrim and Stewart Baker report that half the audiences they have been getting for the French-Canadian family story are children.

"This of course, makes us happy, because it is a fine story for children," they say. "But it is still one of the finest Canadian plays on the stage today."

On Friday at 8.30 p.m., Madge Bradbury, well-known Irish songstress, will give a concert at St. John's Memorial Hall.

WELL-KNOWN IN U.K.

Miss Bradbury, who accompanies herself on the piano, is also well-known on the British Isles as a concert pianist and has performed frequently in that role on the BBC.

Her program for Friday evening is made up of Irish folk songs, English folk songs and a small but interesting trio of Chopin selections for the piano.

Tickets may be obtained from Fletcher's box office, or from any member of the choir of St. John's.

Here's a Hollywood oddity.

A carrier pigeon, being used in the screening of "Son of Sinbad," flew into the thatched roof of a cottage on the sound stage where the picture is being made.

TAKE RUINED

The unscheduled flight ruined the "take" that was being made and almost ruined the pigeon.

The cottage "roof" was a very solid painted backdrop.

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Let's take our hats off to the boys and girls who act as guardians of the school-crossing lanes which now, happily, dot our streets. These nippers do a good job.

At first—not as a motorist but as an adult—I resented being controlled by these juveniles. How could these pupils, said I to myself, be entrusted with such a great responsibility.

What about their sense of judgment? Who could tell whether they would make horseplay out of their new-found authority? Was it good to invest these irresponsibles (in the legal sense of the term) with the powers (no matter how watered down they were) of a traffic cop?

Well, time has told the tale. I doubt if there is one conscientious driver who does not feel safer himself, for their presence, as he pilots his way through the school zones.

Howsomever, because this is not a perfect world and because children are not little angels—although their mothers think them so—I have a bracket of minor complaints.

The first concerns ambitious scholars on bicycles.

These youngsters seem to have no knowledge of the rules of the road. They ride along in clumps, two or three abreast, weaving in and out of the traffic like drunken sailors.

I wonder if some instruction could be given in the classrooms and some adult supervision outside them.

Secondly, there are those students of Oak Bay Junior High School who pour out on foot from that "learn-by-doing" institution and take disorderly possession of the thoroughfare.

I hope they won't think too badly of me when I confess that I have a mischievous yen, quite literally, to bump them off! Let it be hoped that they won't co-operate to enthusiastically with me in this enterprise.

Now I'm faced with a problem. I do not want to be thought a carping critic or a spoil-sport, but I must report that the Memorial Arena is subversive to Sunday schools.

This presents a problem in more ways than one, for I understand that the building is fireproof.

But quite seriously, I wonder if those conscientious citizens who make up the Arena Commission have stopped to consider the effect of Sunday morning public activity in the arena upon the work of all Christian churches?

Take for example, the hours of 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. which are given over to the Victoria Figure Skating Club.

These hours coincide with the church services and with the sessions of most of our Sunday schools.

Personally, I have nothing against figure skating. A little bit of it would probably do my own figure a lot of good.

But the necessity for Sunday morning fancy high-jinks on skates quite escapes me. One thing I know—they won't be using skates in Hell.

Having in mind the fact that the arena has been dedicated as a memorial to the war dead, and that an illuminated text of Holy Scripture adorns the walls of the foyer, isn't it somewhat inconsistent that a private club should be using the facilities of a public building at a time of public worship?

Communism has no monopoly of subversion. Even those who are dedicated to the highest principles of democratic life and thought can turn it upside down through default, inconsistency, ignorance and inertia.

Reservists Await Report on Service

Local Reserve Army units are awaiting the handing down of the Kennedy Report on the reserve force, with considerable anxiety.

The three retired generals who visited all parts of Canada, looking into the woes of the Reserve Army, have completed their report and the findings are expected soon.

CHANGES CERTAIN

Although the army is saying nothing about the probable outcome of the report, it is certain that changes are coming.

Ottawa has already indicated that the reserve force setup will be streamlined to meet present-day conditions.

Some units will be disbanded and others relocated, when the changes come, according to recent announcements.

Although rumors are flying at the Bay Street Armory, there is no authentic information as to how the Kennedy Report will affect reserve units here.

Night Travel Limits View of Country

Graham Suter says he still hasn't seen enough of the country to write a letter about.

Md. Suter has traveled from east to west, and today will return east and back to England, and most of the traveling has been at night.

"When I flew from Toronto the airfield was foggy. I saw a bit of Fort William from the air, and that's all," he said.

LIKES PEOPLE

But he's not saying these things by way of a complaint. He likes the people he has met, he likes the Canadian theatre, although he feels it is a bit too stiff, and he likes traveling.

A small, dapper man of Welsh extraction, Graham Suter likes to organize his day each morning, but finds Canadian newspaper people a stumbling block.

"For some reason or other they always seem to be late or they fail to show," he said.

His impressions of Canada, as a country, have been restricted to the inside of trains, planes and theatres, but he has gathered some very definite impressions about the Canadian theatre.

GOOD AVERAGE

He said he finds the average run of theatre good, technically correct, but unimaginative.

"The companies get the play technically right, but they fail to impart anything of themselves into it. For instance, nobody jumps over furniture in any of the productions. That's the sort of thing I mean," he said. "You have to decide what you are going to do once you have discovered the theme of the story."

As an adjudicator, Mr. Suter refuses to bore the audience with a lot of technical description.

"I try to limit my adjudication to 15 minutes. I say what is wrong and let the audience figure it out for themselves," he said.

But backstage, after the performance, he is prepared to settle down to a two or three-hour chat with the company.

"The audience can expect something by way of adjudication, so I give it to them, but I refuse to stand up there for three-quarters of an hour and talk to people who are not in any way concerned."

But in his adjudication to the audience, Mr. Suter says he makes sure he covers the subject completely, and to the joy

"I don't know how I will stand as far as shows go. I was to go on tour with one when I came out here. But I am going to have a good long rest first, and visit with my family. I have hardly seen my little daughter since she started to talk. I've had enough touring for now," he said.

Knit Swimsuit Model Sweater Girl All Over

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UP)—Shapely Joan Cook glanced down at the newly-designed, knit bathing suit she was modeling and sighed, "It makes me look like a sweater girl all over."

While photographers' flash-bulbs and the eyes of ogling males popped, designer Margit Fellegi of Los Angeles solemnly explained that the knit suits are the latest in attempts to give the American woman a long-torso, long-legged look.

Bathing suits have been knit in the past, said Miss Fellegi, "but as you see this time they don't sag."

In previewing her company's latest summer beachwear fashions, Miss Fellegi also displayed a slick black number with a peek-a-boo panel appropriately called the "Kinsey Retort", a velvet-gold creation called "Gilt Complex," and a dazzler with red sequins which retails at a modest $175.

Little-Known Gadwall Easy Enough To Identify

BY C. J. GUIGUET
Provincial Museum Biologist

The Gadwall is probably the least known of all the ducks that occur in British Columbia. It is confused mainly with female baldpate, mallard and to a lesser extent with female pintails. Both male and female are somewhat drab appearing when compared to our other pond ducks, but the distinguishing features are quite apparent if one knows what to look for.

Gadwalls are medium-sized ducks, somewhat smaller than a mallard, larger than a baldpate. The male in full plumage appears dark grey, with a white breast and black hindparts. The female appears more brownish and with the breast not so clearly white, in fact often mottled with brown. At close range, the grey feathers on the breast and sides of the male show concentric white markings which are distinctive. His greater wing coverts are black and conspicuously edged in bright chestnut—and none of our other ducks have this marking. The rump on both male and female is black and often shows a greenish tinge.

In both sexes also the secondary flight feathers are white, and in flight this shows as a patch at the trailing edge of the wing, which distinguishes this duck from the baldpate, in which the white patch is at the leading edge. The feet of the Gadwall are yellow with black webs and the only other pond ducks with yellow feet are the cinnamon teal, blue-winged teal, and wood duck, all of which are too small to be confused with the Gadwall.

Despite these distinguishing features, many coastal bird watchers confuse this duck with others, and every year we receive a specimen or two at the museum with a big question mark accompanying it.

Gadwalls have a wide distribution, and are found everywhere except in South America and Australia, but they are not abundant anywhere. In North America, they are a bird of the central and western regions, nesting, roughly, north to the 55th parallel, west to the Interior of British Columbia, east to western Manitoba and south to the 40th parallel.

FEW ON COAST

The main wintering range extends in a crescent shape south from the central coast of Washington, through the southern states and Mexico and north again to the 40th parallel. A few Gadwall winter along the British Columbia coast north to the Queen Charlotte Islands, but they are uncommon. In the summer and fall they are more plentiful in the southern Interior, and there are a few nesting records for the Okanagan. Every winter a few are taken by duck hunters on the Lower Mainland and on Vancouver Island.

These birds are one of the few "dabbling ducks" which can and do dive for their food. They feed mainly upon aquatic plants, but like other ducks have taken to the grain fields when such are available.

Many claim the meat of this bird to be second rate, while others say it compares favorably with the mallard. It does occasionally feed on aquatic animals which perhaps accounts for this difference of opinion. As a game bird the Gadwall is unimportant in British Columbia, due mainly to small numbers which occur here.

Vexing Issues Beset Field of Labor Relations

How did it come about that in a comparatively brief period there has arisen a completely new approach to labor-management relationship? In the 19th century the introduction of machines and the factory system in England led to the most deplorable working conditions. This unfortunate development was most apparent in the employment of women and children under shocking conditions. Wage rates were pitifully low, hours of employment extremely long and working conditions for men, women and children indescribably poor.

In short, working conditions reached such a low ebb as to shock public opinion with the result that remedial measures were finally taken.

It was early in the 19th century that England commenced the long series of labor reforms which have continued to the present day. The industrial revolution and its resulting problems occurred first in England. Thus the first real labor legislation was enacted in England and that country gave leadership to the world in the enactment of enlightened labor laws.

It was in England that legislation was first introduced to enable workmen to group together in trade unions for the purpose of improving their lot in life and exempting them from criminal liability under the common law for conspiracy or combination in restraint of trade. The statutory freeing of the unions from criminal responsibility for conspiracy and combination in restraint of trade is the cornerstone on which the trade union movement rests. From it has spread collective bargaining and all the legislation pertaining to labor relations.

While Canadian labor laws and practice owe much to the English Common Law and the statutory law of the U.S.A., we have not been mere imitators of others.

We have, in the main, developed our own ideas in relation to our own conditions. As a result there is now a distinctive Canadian approach to labor legislation, and the province of British Columbia has, in my view, led the parade in developing and applying new ideas. Whether our labor laws are sound and satisfactory is, of course, a matter of opinion.

It is probably not widely realized that in this province, aside from numerous enactments which might refer to employees or wage earners, such as the Workmen's Compensation Act, there are at least 13 British Columbia acts specifically dealing with labor laws.

It is, I think, worth while listing them: Male Minimum Wage Act, Female Minimum Wage Act, Hours of Work Act, Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act, Trade-Unions Act, Annual Holidays Act, Department of Labor Act, Factories Act, Shops Regulation and Weekly Half-Holiday Act, Labor Regulation Act, Control of Employment of Children Act, Public Works Fair Wages and Conditions of Employment Act, Equal Pay Act.

The most controversial and widely known labor act now on the statute books of British Columbia is the Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act.

In the Revised Statutes of British Columbia it is described as "an act respecting the right of employees to organize and providing for mediation, conciliation and arbitration of industrial disputes." Much has been said to the effect that the intention of the act is to encourage collective bargaining. No doubt this is true but any such purpose is subsidiary to the main purpose, the maintenance of economic stability in the community.

"Has our act performed such a function" In my opinion it has "worked wonders" notwithstanding its many limitations and imperfections. Those entrusted with its administration have, with few exceptions, performed most praiseworthy public service under difficult conditions. The Labor Relations Board established under the provisions of this act has from time to time been the target of criticism, abuse and vilification by labor organizations, by individual employers and by corporations. Such a body cannot hope to satisfy all parties, but to my way of thinking the fault does not lie with the board. It is to be found in the act itself.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Pearlman will begin his constructive analysis of the ICA act, dealing especially with the make-up of the Labor Relations Board and some of its methods and powers, and with the merits of labor disputes being settled by the law courts.

Plate of Wonder Food Nourishing—But Soapy

ROME (AP)—Let's all sit down to a heaping dish of quinua, the world's new wonder food.

It's just been discovered by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. The Incas had it before Columbus.

It's remarkably good for you. There's just one trouble—it tastes like soap.

FAO is trying to get rid of that soapy taste and offer a reasonably palatable quinua to a world where hunger still exists.

Its advantages: It thrives in rugged mountains up to 12,000 feet, resists frost, doesn't need rain, and lives in alkaline and other poor soil.

Its disadvantages: The yield per acre is low, it's hard to thresh and it's even harder to eat, because of the taste.

Its value: 100 grams of it (a mighty small meal) contains more starch, proteins and vitamins than a generous helping of condensed milk, a plate of eggs, a fresh fish, and a side dish of assorted vegetables.

The wonder food's possibilities were reported to FAO months ago by the organization's technical field expert in Peru, Alejandro Quesada. Research began at once. Means of stepping up the acre yield and coping with the threshing difficulties have been found. Peruvian chemists went to work trying to find a way either to flavor it or to get rid of the soapy taste.

FAO reports progress. Quinua is now being turned out experimentally in a sort of corn flakes form.

You can hardly taste the soap.

PCs Plan Debate On Unemployment

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—Progressive Conservatives are launching a five-hour afternoon and night debate in the House of Commons Monday on the present unemployment conditions.

After a flying visit to Winnipeg, where he addressed a meeting there, acting prime minister Howe will be back in the House on Monday to explain the government's position.

The debate will serve to emphasize what has been said on the subject of unemployment within the last few days by labor organizations and members of the cabinet.

The government, while admitting unemployment has increased, claims it is scattered and concentrated in no one area or industry. Both Mr. Howe and Finance Minister Abbott say they expect the economy will be back in full gear within the next 10 weeks.

Questioned yesterday as to whether it was possible this is just the beginning of an economic depression, one of the government's economic planners answered this way: "We aren't feeling one now, nor do we anticipate a recession. So we have no over-all plan to combat something that does not exist and that we don't expect to occur."

One of the bases for the prediction of a spring upturn is a capital investment program which from reports being compiled here looks as though it will be approximately the same as last year's $6,200,000,000.

CHICKEN FINE HERBS

Here's a party chicken dish—the greenery makes it very gay—that's quick and simple to prepare. Have the poultryman cut up small fryer or broiler. Using a large skillet and 4 tablespoons of butter, brown your pieces quickly on all sides. Now turn flame way down, add ½ cup of white wine and simmer, covered until chicken is tender. This should take about ½ hour. When done, remove chicken to a hot platter, add 2 tablespoons each of chopped watercress, chive and parsley to the pan, heat again to boiling point and pour over your chicken.

Munich Pact Gave Time For Building-Up of RAF

LONDON (Reuters)—The Munich pact negotiated by Neville Chamberlain failed to appease Hitler, but it gave the Royal Air Force time to prepare for the epic struggle.

Between the signing of the Munich pact in 1938 and the outbreak of war a year later the RAF was able to increase its strength in modern eight-gun fighters by more than five times.

This is one of the disclosures in "Fight at Odds," the first volume of an officially-commissioned three-volume, illustrated history of the RAF in the Second World War.

The author, Denis Richards, head of Morley College, London, was given access to secret documents. He points out that between the two world wars the RAF was "withered down" so that in September, 1938, the fighter command "including all reserves" could muster only 93 of the new eight-gun fighters to oppose a German long-range striking force of 1,200 modern bombers.

REST OBSOLETE

"All the remainder of its 666 aircraft were out-dated biplanes," he notes, adding that "a year later, when war came, over 500 of the modern fighters were immediately available for operations."

In addition to humanitarian considerations, he says, Britain and France decided at the outbreak of war to avoid unrestricted bombing because Britain had only 33 effective bombing squadrons and the French had "no bombers worth mentioning."

But when German bombers plastered Rotterdam in May, 1940, this policy was made unworkable and Britain decided to bomb the Ruhr, which Richards says was "an informal invitation to the Luftwaffe to bomb London."

MISSED OBJECTIVES

Then he adds that owing to the inefficient bombing techniques available at the time the bombers achieved none of their objectives and "the assault on the Ruhr, most cherished of all air staff projects, was a failure."

Nevertheless, "Fight at Odds" discloses that Prime Minister Churchill told his cabinet on the first anniversary of the outbreak of the war: "The navy can lose us the war, but only air force can win it. Therefore our supreme effort must be to gain overwhelming mastery in the air. The fighters are our salvation, but the bombers alone provide the means to victory."

Indian Boys In 'Shooting'

THETIS ISLAND—Two juvenile Indian boys from the Kuper Island Reservation were turned over to RCMP at Chemainus when they proceeded to shoot up the reserve with .22 rifles and stolen ammunition.

Damage was done to boats and other property and one Indian child narrow escaped injury. About $30 worth of ammunition, reportedly stolen from a store on Galiano Island, was discovered in their homes.

Do Your Teeth add years to your Face?

Your own mirror can tell you. See if old-looking teeth are robbing you of your youth each time you smile.
GET WHITER, YOUNGER-LOOKING TEETH IN JUST 3 WEEKS WITH PEPSODENT
Your dentist will tell you that teeth lose their youthful whiteness as they grow older. Far too often however people allow their teeth to become dull and dingy before they should, adding years to the appearance of their faces. If your mirror tells you your teeth aren't as white as they should be, try Pepsodent Dental Cream — Impartial laboratory tests prove that Pepsodent Dental Cream gives you whitest teeth — whiter than other leading toothpastes. Brush your teeth regularly with Pepsodent and in just 3 weeks, see the whiter, younger looking appearance of your teeth. And remember — white teeth are clean teeth and clean teeth help prevent harmful tooth decay.

ASK YOUR DENTIST — Every dentist has a tooth shade detector — it clearly shows that as teeth grow older they grow duller, losing their youthful whiteness. But, you can keep your teeth whiter, younger-looking by regular brushing with Pepsodent. Get Pepsodent today and in just 3 weeks see the improvement for yourself.

Loses Trans-Atlantic Chess

University of Toronto student and Canadian co-champion, Frank Anderson sent congratulations Saturday to Russian grand master Igor Bondarevsky after conceding trans-Atlantic chess match to expert. Anderson, deliberating 13 minutes, conceded game to Russian after 41 moves had been completed. Players had agreed to play 40 moves each in elapsed time of two-and-a-half hours with Anderson just making it with 30 seconds to spare. Canadian board, with timing clocks alongside, was set up at International Hobby and Homecraft Show at Toronto and 82 cables were sent at average cost of $1.75.

Victoria High School Totems can clinch the inter-high school senior boys' basketball championship at Esquimalt High School gym Friday night when they meet the Dockers for the second time this season.

Esquimalt kept in the running Friday night at Mount View by whipping the home team, 48-38, to move back to within two points of the defending-champion Totems. A victory for Totems Friday night would put them beyond reach while Dockers could move into a first-place tie with a win.

Joe Patterson of Esquimalt topped both teams with 10 points while Dick Cameron hooped nine for the losers.

In preliminary games, Esquimalt senior girls defeated Mount View, 23-17, in a league game and Mount View handed Victoria High "B" team its first defeat. Victoria High had only five players in strip, two of them fouling out before half-time, and the game was defaulted early in the third quarter with Mount View ahead, 26-11.

Lineups follow:

Esquimalt—Gilbert 3, Cunningham 3, Bennett 8, Joe Patterson 10, Wright 3, Harris 7, Bryant, Webb 4, Hunter 2, Shaw, McCreadie 8. Total—48.

B.C. Racing Purses Total $750,000 for 72 Days

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than $750,000 in purse money will be offered in 72 days of racing in Vancouver this summer, racing officials said Wednesday.

The 154 season will open with a special two-day meet at Lansdowne Park May 22 and 24, with all proceeds going to the British Empire Games.

The regular season opens at Lansdowne Park June 12, running to July 29 with two breaks, then switches to Exhibition Park August 7 and runs until September 20 with one four-day break.

Highlight of the B.C. Turf and Country Club meet at Lansdowne will be the $5,000 added B.C. Premier's Championship for three-year-olds and up. Another $5,000 added event, the S. W. Randal Plate for three-year-olds and up, will be held at Exhibition Park near the end of the season. Eight other 1954 stakes events, six at Exhibition Park and two at Lansdowne, will be worth $2,000 each.

Minimum purses at Lansdowne will be $850 with two daily $900 events. Minimum purse at Exhibition Park will be $900 with two daily $1,000 events.

Chelsea Keeps Going; Knocks Off Wanderers

LONDON—Chelsea, riding an impressive unbeaten streak in the English Soccer League's Division I, Saturday delighted a home-town crowd of 55,000 by knocking off second-place Wolverhampton Wanderers by a 4-2 count.

The victory avenged an 8-1 beating Chelsea took from Wanderers earlier in the season. A first-minute goal by captain and centre-forward Roy Bentley started them toward Saturday's victory, which marked the 13th game in a row that eighth-place Chelsea has gone without a loss after a poor early-season showing.

ALBION GAINS

West Bromwich Albion taking advantage of Wanderers' surprising defeat, strengthened its lead to three points by scoring a 4-2 victory over Sheffield Wednesday. Huddersfield moved into third place, six points behind the leader, by blanking Middlesbrough, 3-0. Bolton slipped to fourth place when it suffered its first home defeat in 15 games by bowing to Preston, 2-0.

Leicester and Everton remained in a deadlock for the Division II lead, both racking up easy victories. Leicester blanked Plymouth, 3-0 and Everton thumped Derby, 6-2.

In Division III Southern, second-place Brighton squeezed out a 3-2 victory over first-place Ipswich to move to within one point of its opponent. Port Vale strengthened its Division III Northern lead by playing to a scoreless draw with Scunthorpe. Gateshead and Barnsley, tied for second place, were to play each other but the match was postponed because of the ground conditions.

RANGERS TIED

Only two matches were played in the Scottish Leagues Saturday, while the rest of the teams battled it out for the Scottish Cup. No upsets were recorded in cup play although defending Scottish Cup champion Rangers were held to a 2-2 deadlock by Kilmarnock.

Shrine Games Net Hospital Two Millions

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—The annual Shrine East-West football game netted the Crippled Children's Hospital an all-time record of $194,394.15, managing director William Coffman has announced.

The gift brought the total amount of money given to the hospital in the 29 years of the game to "in excess of $2,000,000," Coffman announced.

Net from the first game was only $25,000.

FAMOUS SCHOOL

Eton College in England was founded by Henry VI in 1440 but not completed until 1523.

Same Old Story as Games Near—Money-Raising Campaign Starts

TORONTO (CP)—A campaign started nearly six months ago to finance cost of sending more than 200 Canadian athletes to the July 30-August 7 British Empire Games at Vancouver, has netted only $17,500 to date, it was announced here Friday.

"We need between $50,000 and $75,000 to pay all expenses of the athletes from the time they leave their homes until they return from the games, and we are confident we can get the money," Lt.-Col. George C. Machum of Montreal told a meeting of sports officials.

Col. Machum, chairman of the B.E. Games finance committee, said he expected $30,000 from the dominion and provincial governments, $6,000 from civic governments, $31,000 from private individuals and business firms in Canada and $6,500 from civic governments.

CLOTHING DONATED

"As host country to the Games we shall have entries in every event in the Games and we expect about 224 athletes to go to Vancouver from various parts of the country," he said. "The dress clothing for the athletes—skirts, stockings, hats and jackets for the women and jackets, trousers, ties and hats for the men—has already been donated."

Col. Machum said he had asked the dominion government for a grant of $12,500. The Ontario government has been asked for $7,500, Quebec $4,000 and $1,000 each from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland will be asked for $500 each.

Machum arrived in Toronto to set up a committee to solicit $12,500 from individuals and business firms. Only $735 of Toronto's objective has been reached, while $7,500 of Montreal's $12,500 objective has been met.

In addition to money from the dominion and provincial governments and private individuals and business firms, Col. Machum said he expected about $2,500 each from Toronto and Montreal civic officials and $500 each from Winnipeg, London and Hamilton civic officials.

"Our aim is to make sure that any athlete competing for Canada doesn't have to pay a nickel in expenses," Col. Machum said. "I feel sure that the people of Canada won't let them down."

MONDAY-WOODWARD'S 1.49 SALE DAY

Special Note Re $1.49 Day

Woodward's one price $1.49 Sale Day is brought to you by the Woodward family of stores.

Woodward's $1.49 Day, (successor to the famous 95c Day) is held in all Woodward stores on the same day.

Four basic principles:

1. Honestly represented values. Every $1.49 Day special must be worth considerably more.
2. Customers treated fairly. Woodward management takes poor view of bringing customers down town for specials which have disappeared from the counters long before the day is over.
3. Understated conservative advertising. Only fine print used. Woodward's do not use such words as colossal, stupendous, terrific, half-off, three-quarters off, or sacrifice sale, etc.
4. Every $1.49 article represents big value but small print only is used for description.

An item in a Montreal newspaper indicated that the Victoria Cougars might have been trying to get Doc Couture, veteran NHL forward. It said Couture was to have been used in a deal with Montreal Canadiens, who planned to send him to a farm club. However, Couture preferred Calgary in the Western Hockey League, was later sent to Quebec Aces of the Quebec Hockey League and suspended when he refused to report . . . the Cougars were also said to have been eyeing a couple of players suspended by Eddie Shore for refusing to move from Syracuse of the AHL to Springfield of the QHL, notably defensemen Gordie Tottle and Keith Allen. Shore, however, is not the easiest person to do business with . . . Defenseman Jack Evans, late of the Saskatoon Quakers, is given a major portion of credit for the improved play of the New York Rangers and is apparently in the NHL to stay this time . . . picking an all-star Western Hockey League team gets tougher and tougher as the season moves along but in this view, Lorne Worsley is the league's best netminder, Allen Stanley the best defenseman and Jackie McLeod the best right-winger. There are a half dozen, including Victoria's Ed Dorohoy, who will get centre-ice support, about four or five top-notch leftwingers, and a number of defensemen who rate consideration. Most valuable player award should be a landslide for Worsley. . . Seattle's Bill Davidson tied a WHL record for most points in one game for a defenseman last Sunday by getting his first goal of the season and four assists in that 10-2 rout of Saskatoon Quakers . . . Murray Parker of the Quakers also got his first goal of the season, Friday night . . . Montreal Canadiens are certain to set one new NHL record this season. With 16 games left to play, then need only another four minutes in penalties to break the record of 841 minutes, set by Toronto Maple Leafs in 1951-51 . . . Cougar's Alex Kuzma, always johnny-on-the-spot in those scrambles, has scored eight of his 15 goals this season against Seattle Bombers. Sam Bettio has scored nine of 17 against the WHL trailers while Ed Dorohoy has two goals and 17 assists . . .

Can you remember when it cost a fellow $7,000 to win a world boxing championship which he was unable to defend? It happened in 1946 when Marty Servo knocked out Freddie Cochrane in the fourth round to win the welterweight title. Servo had guaranteed Cochrane a purse of $50,000 to defend but when the crowd fell below expectations, had to dig into his own pocket for $7,000 to meet the guarantee. Servo was then matched against Sugar Ray Robinson for the title fight which figured to gross $250,000. But Servo received a serious nose injury in training which ended his ring career before the Robinson fight.

If nothing else, Ted Williams is an outspoken realist. Informed that his manager, Lou Boudreau of the Boston Red Sox, had high hopes that his team could win the American League pennant, Williams blurted: "The Yankees are the team to beat. It would be silly to think we could do it." Wonder what that makes Boudreau? . . . It seems like yesterday but it was 11 years ago that Cornelius Warmerdam set the pole vault record at 15 feet eight and a half inches and 10 years ago since since he made the last of 43 vaults of more than 15 feet. Time does fly . . . In reply to a query, Robin Roberts and Curt Simmons, pitching aces of the Philadelphia Phils, are 27 and 24 years of age, respectively . . . the National Football League is certainly winning its 'war' against Canadian teams so far. It has lost Arnie Weinmeister but has taken three or four stars back and succeeded in signing most of the best college talent . . . former WIL players cut quite a swathe in the class "AA" Southern Association last season. Jack Harshman, former Victoria first-baseman turned pitcher, was voted the most valuable player. Dick Sinovic, former Vancouver outfielder, was runner-up and outfielders Bill Wilson and Bill Taylor also received plenty of support . . . it cost the New York Rangers about $3,500 to bring Doug Bentley back to the NHL. The money was spent for transportation, telephone calls by the dozen, and 'extra money' . . . Sheila Boyd, a Lake Cowichan miss who met John Boyd when his club made a rugby tour, will marry the Irish internationalist late in July. . . Who will be the comeback star of the year in the major league? There are a dozen or more established stars, such as Hank Bauer, Bobby Shantz, Ferris Fain, Hoyt Wilhelm and Joe Black, who had bad seasons last year . . . Joseph Barthel, the Olympic 1,500 metre champion from Luxembourg, is considered a cinch to set a new indoor mile record as soon as someone makes his run his best. In two recent races in the U.S., Barthel, who has a tremendous finishing kick, did the last quarter in less than 59 seconds, which is really moving. Gunder Hagg did his last 440 yards in 60 seconds flat when he set the world outdoor record of 4.01.4 and Arne Anderson needed 61.4 seconds for the last quarter when he stepped the mile in the second fastest time ever recorded—4.01.06.

GUESSING DEPARTMENT: Canadiens, Rangers, and Detroit in the NHL tonight. Seattle in the WHL. Heaney's and Wests in district soccer. Monday: Saskatoon in WHL. Batting average to date: At bat 101, hits 70, percentage .693.

Action in Basketball Playoff

Parker, in Brilliant Form, Sparks Kins to Second Win

BY DOUG PEDEN

Chunky Gerry Parker, taking over where Norm Baker left off the night before, sparked Victoria Kins into a two-game lead in the Vancouver Island senior "A" men's basketball finals as the defending champions hustled to an 80-69 victory over Alberni Athletics at Victoria High School last night.

Playing perhaps the finest game in his career, Parker, who potted 18 points and turned in a tremendous all-round display, stepped into the breach when the Kins threatened to fall apart in the third quarter. He inspired the Victorians as they battled from behind a 33-40 deficit to the important triumph that gave them a commanding 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series.

FAVORED TO WIN

Kins, who dropped six successive games to the A's before grabbing a 65-60 win Friday night, are now favored to retain the title they took in four games last season although all remaining games will be played at Alberni.

Next game is scheduled Friday night with other games Saturday and February 27, if necessary.

Johnny Clark, although shackled by a tight Alberni defense until the late stages when the Kins' long-range marksmanship and ball control forced the losers to check further out, set the scoring pace for Kins with 24 points. Clark scored 10 points on free throws before dunking his first field basket in the third quarter and included 14 free shots and five field baskets in his total for the night.

ALBERNI STILL THREAT

Despite the fact that they were outplayed in the final stages last night, Alberni is far from out of the running in its bid for the title. The A's were the better-looking club up until the time the Kins staged their rally, and appeared for a time as if they would deadlock the series.

Youngsters Doug Brinham and Dave Williamson set the pace for Alberni in the first half and it was veteran Harry Kermode, who came through with four baskets in the final quarter in great effort, that kept Alberni hopes alive for the many Alberni fans in the packed gymnasium.

FIRST THREE

Hustling Elmer Curtis threw up the first three baskets for Kins as they forged into an early lead, which they held until Brinham flipped in a one-hander to give Alberni a 17-16 lead at the start of the second quarter.

Baker, a tower of strength again last night, put Victoria ahead, 23-22, midway in the quarter, but Williamson sent the A's in front again on the return rush.

Neither club held more than a four-point lead until Alberni, starting with a rush in the third quarter, extended its 34-31 half-time margin into a seven-point lead before Kins staged their rally.

Parker, who held Williamson to three points in the final half, potted nine points in the third quarter, and stole the ball from the up-Islanders on three occasions and grabbed off more rebounds than any of his taller mates.

It was in the rebound department that the winners appeared weakest and their laxity under the boards could have been their downfall against the springy-legged Alberni squad—but for a great display of long-range shooting.

Kins entering the final quarter with a 59-50 bulge, worked confidently through the final stages with Howie Tooby, with three clever baskets, and Clark leading the way in scoring.

Shifty Al Brown picked up 13 points on his one-handed flip shots to tie Brinham and Kermode for the visitors' scoring honors while Williamson ended up with 12 points and coach Elmer Spiedel, former Seattle University ace, accounted for 10.

Lineups follow:

Alberni Athletics—Joe Samarin 5, Doug Brinham 13, Elmer Spiedel 10, Al Brown 13, Harry Kermode 13, Dave Williamson 12, Jack Mosdell, Denny Grisdale 2, Ron Gray 1, Laurie Veitch. Total—69.

Scores in Losing Cause

Jim Pennington (No.10) of Alberni Athletic Association fires shot just beyond outstretched fingers of Scott and Peden's Roger Garden during Vancouver Island junior men's basketball playoff at Victoria High School last night. Pennington, who connected on this try, dropped 12 points in losing cause as Alberni took 88-44 beating in first game of two-game total-point series.

Royals Stop Cougar Threat, 8-1— Stamps Rally To Tie Quakers, 5-5

VICTORIA	56	20	26	10	156	177	50
Seattle	55	18	31	6	158	187	42

Next game tonight: New Westminster at Seattle, Monday: Vancouver at Saskatoon.

New Westminster Royals, who when they can't do anything else right, can usually clobber Victoria Cougars, did it again last night as they ended the Victoria threat to their fifth-place standing with an 8-1 trimming.

In the other Western Hockey League game played last night, Calgary Stampeders came from behind with two goals in the last three minutes to earn a 5-5 tie with the Quakers at Saskatoon.

JUST A JINX

Royals, who had lost five straight and were winless in their last six games, made it nine victories in 13 games with the Cougars. The Islanders have won three and tied one and have given up 54 goals in the 13 games. To make matters worse, the last time Royals had won was on January 22, when they trounced the Cougars, 6-3.

Action was slow to get started as the boat was late and held up matters for an hour and it remained slow throughout. As in almost every previous game between the two teams, penalties played a big part in the result. The Royals broke away for two goals while Tony Schneider served a first-period penalty and the Cougars never recovered. Royals also scored their fifth goal while playing with odd man and now have connected about 20 times on power plays against the Victorians.

It was 3-0 at the end of the first period, 5-0 at the end of the second, and 6-0 when Andy Hebenton prevented a shutout with his 20th goal of the season to end a long personal scoring drought.

Extra excitement was provided by a Victoria fan who accompanied the Cougars on their fruitless quest for fifth place. He got into a fight with referee Scotty Morrison, who swung back, in the aftermath of some high-sticking between Ed Dorohoy and Royals' Jackie Hamilton near the end of the second period.

At Saskatoon, 4,500 fans saw the Quakers hold a big territorial edge but they were unable to stop the Jim McFadden-Steve Black-Pat Lundy line and found Calgary goalie Bill Brennan quite a handful.

LINE TOO GOOD

Brennan made 29 stops, many of them spectacular, as against 19 for Chuck Rayner. And the above-mentioned Calgary line figured in all five goals for the Stampeders. Lundy assisted on all five goals. McFadden had two goals and two assists and Black two goals and one assist.

Quakers were ahead until 18.25 of the third period and had an apparently-safe 5-3 bulge with only two minutes and 15 seconds left. Then McFadden connected and Black tied it up 40 seconds later right from the face-off as the Saskatoon defense got sloppy.

Marilyn Could Be Answer To Lagging Attendances

HIROSHIMA (UP)—A local radio announcer told his audience Saturday that Marilyn Monroe had just walked into the neighborhood ball park. Five thousand fans turned off their sets and rushed to the park.

Marilyn, dressed in a two-piece brown dress, was pushed and jostled by the crowd as she tried to walk behind the backstop to sit with Mrs. Frank O'Doul, wife of the San Diego Padres' manager.

On the field the blonde's husband, Joe DiMaggio, Lefty O'Doul and former Yankees third baseman Capt. Bobby Brown were forgotten by the fans.

Kaleta, Manson, Dorohoy Tied for Scoring Lead

The Western Hockey League individual scoring race tightened up last night as Ray Manson and Alex Kaleta, both of Saskatoon, moved into a tie with Victoria's Ed Dorohoy.

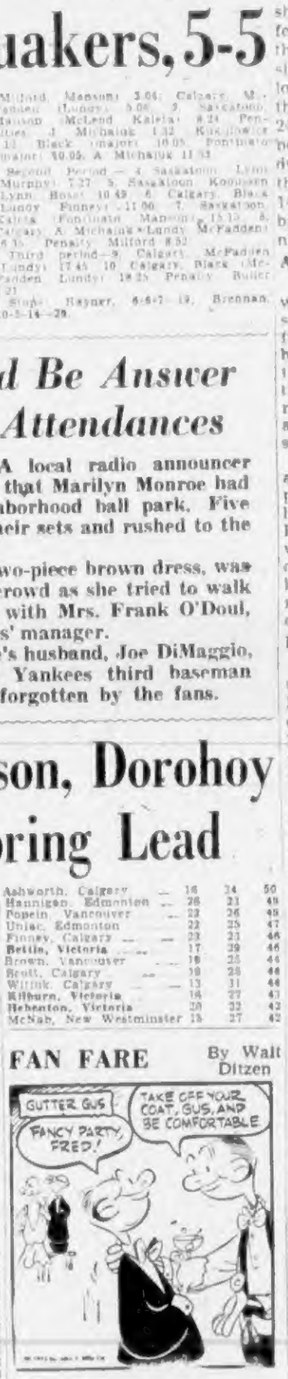

Manson picked up three points, Kaleta got two while Dorohoy was held off the scoresheet at New Westminster and the trio are tied with 60 points. Enie Selsizzi of Edmonton is one point behind and Guyle Fielder of Seattle and Bobby Love of New Westminster are well up with 57 points.

Duncan Takes Lower Island Ladies' Crown

Duncan captured the Lower Island senior "B" women's championship at Saanichton Agricultural Hall last night by thumping Sidney, 56-44, to win the two-game total-point series by 40 points. Duncan won the first game at the up-Island centre Monday, 50-22.

Saanichton took a 13-point lead in the first game of a two-game, total-point Lower Island juvenile girls semi-final series by trimming Lake Cowichan, 46-33. Second game is scheduled at Lake Cowichan Friday night.

In the opener, Saanichton bantam boys downed Brentwood, 48-24, in an exhibition game.

Clippers Wind Up Play With 6-4 Win Over Vs

HOW THEY STAND

Next games: Wednesday, Merchants vs. V's; Nanaimo vs. Navy, Memorial Arena.

Nanaimo's league-leading Clippers wound up regular season play at Nanaimo in the Commercial Hockey League here Saturday night, besting Victoria Vs, 6-4, for their 16th victory in 18 starts on home ice.

Defeat dropped Vs into a second-place tie with defending champion Merchants, but second and third places will be decided Wednesday night at Memorial Arena when the clubs meet for the final time in scheduled play this season. The last game of the schedule pits Nanaimo against Navy at 9 p.m.

In closing out their season here against Vs, Clippers made it five victories in six games. Nanaimo has lost once to Vs and once to Navy while taking six straight decisions from Merchants.

Nanaimo scored twice in the opening period and held their two-goal edge through the second and third frames. A pair of goals by Jack Milburn, a standout for Vs, tied the score early in the second frame but Nanaimo scored two unanswered goals to hold a 4-2 edge going into the final period.

John Makowsky and Bob Fowler scored V's other goals, with Makowsky, a former junior star, getting his first marker since joining the club last week. Bud Dumont scored twice for the winners and Don Plensky, Angie DeFelice, Red Carr and Dick Haslam got singletons.

Also starring for V's were Fergie McPherson, former coach of Nanaimo's senior Clippers, who picked up two assists, and goalie Arnold Jorgenson.

SUMMARY

First Period—1, Nanaimo, D. Plensky (Carr), 8.23. 2, Nanaimo, Dumont (Robinson), 15.02. Penalty: Burrows 18.35.

Eilers Ahead At Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—Eilers defeated Cloverleafs 78-65 Saturday in the first game of the best-of-seven series for the Vancouver senior "A" men's basketball championship.

Bob Pickell led Eilers with 30 points while Nev Munroe had 14, Ron Stewart scored 15 and Don Mulhern 11 for Cloverleafs.

Eilers led 23-20, 40-29 and 55-43 by quarters.

Teams in Tie For VMD Fivepin Lead

Teams No. 6 and No. 7 each picked up three points at Gibson's Bowladrome Friday night to remain in a first-place tie in the VMD Fivepin Bowling League while team No. 16 kept pace two points back with a three-point performance for a total of 17 points.

E. Edmonds Sr. rolled 734 for the night's high triple while D. Leonard Jr., who posted a 303 single, recorded a 696 three-game total. Other high triples were rolled by I. Pepper, 672; V. Kent, 653; Smith, 633; O. Lewis, 624; O. Speirs, 620; and E. Ennis, 616.

Undefeated Since 1928, Champ Quits

NEW YORK (AP)—Pierre Etchebaster, 60, world open champion of court tennis since 1928, retired Friday, ending one of the longest undefeated reigns in the history of sports.

Etchebaster has not lost a match—except for handicap exhibitions — since wrestling the world open championship from G. F. Covey of Grabbet Park, England, in 1928. He had won the American professional title earlier from Jack Soutar of Philadelphia.

Victoria Junior Cagers Trounce Alberni, 88-42

Howie Tooby's well-drilled Scott & Peden team ran wild against Alberni at Victoria High School gym last night, swamping the up-Island crew by an 88-42 count to take a huge lead in the first game of a two-game, total-point series for the Vancouver Island junior boys crown.

The Feedmen will carry a 46-point lead into the second game at Alberni Friday night and are a cinch to advance into the B.C. final against the Vancouver winner.

The winners were never in trouble last night, holding a 25-13 lead at the end of the first quarter and a 49-24 edge at half time. Alberni came up with its best display in the third quarter but Victoria switched to a fast break and outscored the losers by 19 points in the final quarter.

Only Roger Garden failed to hit the score-sheet for the winners last night. Al Snowsell hooped 25 points, 19 of them in the first half, and lanky Bill Dobbie added 16.

Lineups follow:

Alberni—J. Perry 2, M. Boylan 7, P. Greeney 2, Jim Pennington 12, L. Hamlin, D. Marshall 12, I. MacDonald, E. Pryzyk 6. Total—42.

Minor Soccer Play Results In Blankings

Gorgeway and Shepherd's Dairy scored victories in Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Football Association play yesterday afternoon as wet grounds forced postponement of two of the four matches scheduled.

Bernie Fredrickson and Barry Menzies each scored once in pacing Gorgeway to a 2-0 victory over Esquimalt Meat Market in Division IV action. Goals by Gerry Woodward and Jim Peters gave Shepherd's Dairy a 2-0 win over Eagles in the only Division V game played.

The other Division V match between Combines and Heaney's was postponed and an exhibition game between Black & White Taxi of Division III and Eagles of Division IV was also called off.

Amateur Tops Laredo Open; Record Score

LAREDO, Tex. (AP)—Wesley Ellis, San Antonio amateur, shot a record six-under-par 66 Saturday to snatch the first round lead in the $3,000 Laredo open golf tournament.

Ellis headed a field of 105, many of them from the winter PGA tour.

Tied for fourth at 69 were three professionals — former Spokane golfer Al Mengert of New York, Loddie Kempa of Oklahoma City and Michael Fetchick of Quaker Ridge, N.Y.

Ed (Porky) Oliver of Palm Springs, Fla., a tournament favorite, shot a 70 with the largest gallery following him.

Reg. Stone in Uphill Battle To Reach B.C. Brier Final

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—Vancouver's Bung Cartmell defeated British Columbia curling champion Reg Stone of Trail 9-6 late Saturday in the first game of their two-game British Columbia curling playoff.

TRAIL — Reg Stone, who has represented British Columbia in the Canadian curling championships for the past two years, may yet make it three in a row.

The Trail skip climaxed an uphill climb here Saturday by winning the [illegible] playoff, to qualify to meet Bung Cartmell's undefeated Vancouver rink in the final between section winners for the right to represent B.C.

Stone was eliminated in the Macdonald's Brier zone playdowns at Trail but got a reprieve when Mel Strickland's Prince George rink was unable to make the trip to Trail to compete in the Brier finals. The B.C. Curling Association then decided that the winner of the Grand Challenge in the Trail bonspiel [illegible] Strickland's spot.

Stone started his great comeback by winning the Trail Grand Challenge to join the other 15 zone winners in the Brier playoff. But things were rocky at the start and Stone lost two of his first three games and was all but out of competition.

However, Stone had just started to fight. He won his next three games to make his record 4-2. Meanwhile, Trail's O. H. Gill moved along smoothly to post a 5-1 record, but he had to play Stone in the seventh, and last, draw. Stone eked out an 11-9 win to tie Gill for section "A" leadership, then squeezed out an 8-7 win in the extra game to qualify to meet Cartmell.

Cartmell moved along without too much trouble in section "B" and won his first six games to make it certain as each of the seven other rinks in his group lost at least twice. Cartmell and Stone immediately started their playoff and it will be some time Sunday morning before the results will be known.

Stone's path to the final was made easier when Harry McConachie's Vancouver rink faded after winning four straight and lost its last three games.

The two Vancouver Island rinks didn't come close. George Lunn's Nanaimo rink curled well but could do no better than break even in its first six games. Ollie Panzer of Duncan won twice, once by default, and lost five games.

Other rinks in the final were skipped by [illegible] J. J. Cameron and A. M. Chesser of Trail; F. Tinling of Vancouver; A. Caldwell and H. Jordan of Kimberley; R. Ottem of Kamloops; Lynn Valair of Vernon; W. Hobbs of Kelowna, and M. Ryalls of Nelson. All won at least twice, except Ottem, who had one win in six games.

The winner of the Cartmell-Stone final will go to Edmonton for the Canadian championships March 1.

The TACKLE BOX

BY JIM TANT

Few people who fish realize how much thought and experimentation have gone into the lure they are using. In most cases, the fellow who puts a new lure on the market does so only after hundreds of hours of fishing and adjusting. Then, he spends more hundreds of hours trying to improve it.

I got some idea of just what the manufacture of a new lure entails last Monday when I accompanied Babs Jaggard on a fishing trip with Rhys Davis, who put the Strip-teaser on the market last August.

The Strip-teaser is a plastic head made to hold herring strip and so rigged that a minor adjustment can change action. It is such a simple affair that not many would think Davis experimented for some time before he was ready to manufacture and now spends every available hour on the water in an effort to improve it and get the right action out of new sizes he hopes to have ready for this year's salmon fishing.

Davis' first model had a one-inch head and he didn't market it until he had tried dozens of ideas for the head and experimented until he had a suitable plastic. That his idea was good is proven by the fact that he sold more than 500 dozen in short order. Now he is working on a three-quarter-inch size and has a half-incher planned for the near future.

Cutting the strip right is, of course, the big item and Davis, who also markets the strip for his lure, is out on waters adjacent to his Schwartz Bay home whenever weather permits, experimenting with different cuts.

On Monday, he was trying to find the perfect strip for his new three-quarter-inch size. He explained that the one-inch head needed a 'rigid' action and that the smaller size needed a 'fluttering' action. By cutting the strip to paper thinness near the end and slicing the tail up about an inch, he produced as realistic an action as anyone is likely to see. The limpid tail gave the strip perfect swimming action when trolled fast and for those who prefer to use strip, I'll miss my guess if the three-quarter-inch size doesn't prove to be a particular hit with coho salmon.

Davis, an enthusiastic fisherman all his life, used to be a fur-cutter, pattern-maker and fitter for a large Seattle department store but is a Vancouver Islander by birth and preference—years of fishing have convinced him that the best fishing time is between the end of the ebb and start of the flood tide and that big tides are the poorest time to try for salmon—in more than 30 trips since the first of the year off Piers and Arbutus Islands, he hasn't missed once and has averaged about three salmon a trip weighing between five and 28 pounds. He releases anything under three pounds.—Art Hancock, veteran Cowichan River guide, has cheering news for those who wondered about the poor fishing in Cowichan Bay last year. Hancock, who has guided on the Cowichan for 25 years, states that the water level last Autumn was the highest in 30 years and that spawning runs didn't have to dally in the bay but made their way straight up the river. "Plenty of salmon spawned here last year," he states . . . there are still a lot of steelhead in the Cowichan but it won't be long before the runs are over. Other Island rivers are also producing steelies and fishing should be good over the week end . . . Reports from Saanich Inlet are still not good. Bluebacks and grilse can be seen jumping in promising numbers but they haven't been taking and reports of success are scattered . . . fishing has been better in the Crofton area, where reports indicate that some are limiting while others have been having trouble . . . it's only about two weeks to trout season and time for everyone to get their tackle ready. Hancock expects some fine fishing in the Cowichan come March 1 . . . Buttons Heglin and Les Curran, two of the stubbornest steelheaders in these parts, still have to beach their first fish but they are still giving it a battle. For their information, Hancock says that there is usually a good March run in the Chemainus River and if that doesn't work, there are always the summer steelhead in the Alberni area . . . and, lastly, there is a rumor that Andy Anderson, president of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association, is getting interested in steelheading. Must have given up trying to catch a salmon. . .

Lively Program Planned For Minor Hockey Night

Victoria's minor hockey players will show their wares before the public tomorrow night at Memorial Arena with four games featuring "Minor Hockey Night," sponsored by the Victoria Minor Hockey Association.

It is the association's annual night each year to raise funds to help ease the tremendous expense of purchasing equipment for more than 400 youngsters in five divisions.

Opening the four-hour program will be a Midget Division game at 7 p.m., followed by opening ceremonies at 7.55 p.m. During the ceremonies all the players will mass on the ice and cadets representing the three services will also take part. Rev. J. Jones of Colwood will say a short prayer and VMHA Bill Davison will give a short report.

Lester Patrick, owner of Victoria Cougars and Canada's outstanding hockey figure, will face off the puck to open the second game of the evening between two all-star Pee Wee Division teams at 8.10.

Players in the Bantam Division will take over at 8.45 p.m., and junior all-star teams from Nanaimo and Victoria clash at 9.45. Winding up the program will be an exhibition broom-ball game (?) between members of the press and radio against a combined policemen, firemen team at 10.45.

In addition, the fans will be able to win several door prizes, topped by a television set.

Selvy Scores 100 Points For New Mark

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Frank Selvy of Furman rewrote the major college basketball scoring record book again Saturday night with a tremendous 100-point spree as Furman defeated Newbury 147-93.

Selvy's phenomenal performance, which broke the single game record of 73 set by Bill Milkvy of Temple in 1951 against Wilkes, gave him a career record, in less than three seasons, of 2,197 — 43 more than the previous four-year career total set by Jim Lacy of Baltimore Loyola in 1948-49.

Pointer Wins Stake

HERNANDO, Miss. (AP)—Hall's Stonecroft Babe, a fleet pointer, owned by Mrs. A. Acton Hall of Cincinnati, was named winner Saturday of the United States Field Trial Association's coveted all-age stake.

Joins Rainiers

GENE BEARDEN

Seattle Rainiers Saturday acquired Gene Bearden, former Cleveland Indian pitcher in a deal which sent Alex Garbowski and pitcher Art Del Duca from Pacific Coast League club to Charleston of American Association. Bearden was rookie sensation with Cleveland in 1948, winning 20 and losing seven games. Since then he has toiled with Washington, Detroit, St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox.

Civil Service, United In Zone Soccer Final

BY DOUG PEDEN

Civil Service, powered by the three-goal outburst of big Charlie Constable and sparked by the play of Jack MacIntyre, came from behind at Royal Athletic Park yesterday afternoon to down Esquimalt, 4-1, in a lower Vancouver Island zone semi-final match in Province Cup soccer competition.

The Servants, who overcame a 2-0 deficit as they eliminated Wood Motors, 3-2, in a first-round replay last Sunday, are now scheduled to meet Victoria United of the Coast Soccer League in the zone final at Royal Athletic Park next Saturday.

LACK FINISH

Considering the soggy condition of the pitch, yesterday's match between the two Victoria and District Football Association clubs was a well-played affair with league-leading Esquimalt holding a good share of territorial play but seldom able to appear dangerous when within scoring range.

Civil Service had the two best opportunities in the scoreless first half. Centre-forward Red McMillan drove directly into Gene Pednault's arms in the opening minutes and Constable had two successive close-in drives blocked by Glen Underwood shortly after McMillan, favoring a pulled leg muscle, had been replaced by Don Hendry at 32 minutes.

LOSERS GET FIRST

The Dockyarders, staging a sustained attack after the intermission, went in front at the eight-minute mark as Ken Barnes took a return pass from winger Alex Stewart and placed a low shot past netminder Archie McMillan.

Ten minutes later, with Esquimalt still holding the initiative, coach Bobby Bell sent MacIntyre in for Hendry and his neat touches appeared to provide the missing spark for the Servants' attack.

MacIntyre tied it at 1-1 three minutes after coming into the game, moving in to tap Bob Allen's ground-hugging cross from Pednault's hands and into the goal.

Then Constable took over the scoring chores.

With Pednault sprawled after saving from Allen, the rugged inside-forward bustled in to angle the ball into an open net and put the Servants ahead. Shortly after blasting far over the bar on his best chance of the day, Constable turned up in the right spot to boot home a rebound from Fuzz Blair's long shot.

COMPLETES EFFORT

Constable completed his hat trick three minutes from the final whistle, capturing opponent Ed Young's weak pass and moving neatly through the Esquimalt defense before firing the shot that snuffed out the losers' glimmering hopes.

Two district league games are scheduled this afternoon. Canadian Scottish and Victoria West will tangle at Heywood Avenue Park and Wood Motors will take on Heaney's at Bullen Park. Both games start at 2.15.

Lineups follow:

Esquimalt—Gene Pednault; Dave Unwin, Ken Druce; Whitey Wakelyn, Glen Underwood, Nip Sage; Jack Blevin, Gordie Duncan, Ken Barnes, Ed Young, Alex Stewart. Reserves—Alf Armitage, Jack Adams, Jack Harding, Wally Wehaler.

Wilt Helps Ashenfelter To Smash Own Record

BY MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UP)—FBI-man Horace Ashenfelter set a new world indoor two-mile record Saturday night when he was clocked in 8.50.5, while little Josy Barthel of Luxembourg streaked to a 4.08.5 triumph in the Baxter Mile in the New York Athletic Club track and field games at Madison Square Garden.

Five minutes after Fred Wilt, also of the FBI, finished second to Barthel by 15 yards in the mile event, he stationed himself at a strategic point alongside the track to help Ashenfelter break the two-mile record of 8.50.7, held by Wilt himself.

SIGNAL SYSTEM

Signalling Ashenfelter with his hands, Wilt pointed his fingers downward or upward, depending upon whether Ashenfelter was ahead or behind the record pace as he ran past him. Wilt pointed his fingers toward the floor as Ashenfelter trailed Charles Capozzoli of the N.Y. A.C., after one mile.

The slender Ashenfelter regained the lead on the 12th lap of the 22-lap grind but Capozzoli dogged his heels. With six laps to go, Ashenfelter finally shook Capozzoli and when the time for the mile and three-quarters was announced at 7.44.7, Wilt kept pointing his forefinger downward, indicating to his FBI buddy that he had to step up the pace.

Spurred on by the co-operative Wilt, Ashenfelter gradually moved farther out in front to beat Capozzoli by half a lap. John Joe Barry, who set the pace for the first four laps, was third.

MUCH TOO GOOD

In the mile event, Barthel, the little "Luxembourg Express," who runs only fast enough to win, played possum with the field but called upon his reserve to outdistance Wilt easily in the final lap.

Scoring his fifth straight mile victory in the United States, Barthel contented himself to shuttle between third and last place in the five-man field until only two laps remained in the 11-lap event. Streaking ahead from his third-place position, the little blond Luxembourger passed both Wilt and pace-maker Gordon McKenzie of the New York Pioneer Club, with consummate ease.

College Names Shuttle Team For Title Meet

Ten students from Victoria College will take part in the Inter-Varsity badminton championships at University of British Columbia gym on March 6.

The team was named last week after the annual shuttle championships at Victoria College.

Ron Birch won the men's singles title by defeating Peter Sharp, 15-8, 10-15, 15-13; Marilyn Bassett took the women's singles crown by downing Beth Martin, 11-8, 11-2; Birch and Sharp won the men's doubles championship by edging Ken Yingling and Ross Young, 15-8, 14-17, 15-12, and Birch shared in a third title when he partnered Miss Bassett in winning the mixed doubles title with a 15-5, 15-8 victory over Young and Shelia Hardie.

Representing Victoria College will be Birch, Sharp, Yingling, Young, Vic Bradley, Joe Ellis and Misses Bassett, Martin, Sheila Kingham and Hardie.

Eskimos Sign New Gardener

EDMONTON (CP) — Robert Edward Brown, a 21-year-old Toronto outfielder, has signed with Edmonton Eskimos of the Western International Baseball League.

Brown is a veteran of three years in professional baseball. He played last year with Phoenix, a New York Giant farm club in the Arizona-Texas League where he was chosen an all-star. He hit 28 home runs and had a batting average of .336.

Bonus Player Quits Game For Paint Job

NEW ORLEANS (UP) — Tookie Gilbert, the Giants' $50,000 bonus player, quit baseball Saturday and announced that he is going into the paint business, the New Orleans Item said in a copyrighted story.

The 24-year-old first baseman, who was groomed for baseball from the cradle by his famous father, Larry Gilbert, said he was trading his bat for "future security and a more solid family life."

Tookie took the action with a major league contract in his mailbox. The player said he had been offered a "real good opportunity" by a New Orleans paint company.

U.S. May Get John Landy Before Games

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—John Landy, top Australian miler, said Saturday he will discuss with U.S. professional sprinter Mel Patton next week an offer to run in the United States this year.

Landy is interested in the U.S. tour because plans for a proposed trip to Finland are "up in the air" and he doesn't want to go to the British Empire Games in Vancouver next July without a chance to keep in shape at some interim meets.

"I will go to any country as long as arrangements are made to enable me to produce my best efforts. I will not go direct to the Empire Games and, without any time to get acclimated, run as dismally as Johansson did Thursday."

Denis Johansson of Finland finished eighth in a 10-man field when Landy won a special mile race here in 4.05.6.

Vancouver Bests UBC, Wins McKechnie Cup

HOW THEY STAND

UBC	3	0	2	0	6	25	0

VANCOUVER—Giving one of the finest English rugby displays seen in Vancouver in years, Vancouver Reps Saturday clinched the McKenzie Cup by blanking UBC Thunderbirds, 14-0, before about 500 fans at Brockton Point Oval.

The Reps scored all their points in a brilliant first-half display, securing possession of the ball from almost every set scrum and passing and running brilliantly. 'Birds were a much improved side in the second half and, although they pressed continually, couldn't finish off their attack.

It was Vancouver's third straight victory in the series and gave the Reps possession of the McKechnie Cup for the first time in several years. UBC won the championship last year but lost two straight matches in this year's competition, the first coming at the hands of Victoria Crimson Tide, 11-0.

Reps opened the scoring after five minutes of play, when Don Spence crossed the line after a five-yard scrum and Hilary Wotherspoon converted. Two minutes later, the ball was kicked over UBC's line and Ray Cocking rushed in and fell on the loose ball. Lionel Feeney dropped a 30-yard goal to put the winners ahead, 11-0, and Cocking scored his second try of the afternoon after 25 minutes of play.

BROKEN NOSE

Reps lost Ernie Norman early in the second half when the big forward was forced to leave the field because of a broken nose and UBC had the edge for the remainder of the game.

Two games are remaining on the schedule but it's extremely doubtful whether they will be played. Both Victoria and Vancouver are far behind in league play because of the poor weather in recent weeks.

Saturday nights scores: Montreal 3 at Toronto 2; New York 0 at Boston 1.

New York Rangers dropped a crucial "four-pointer" to Boston last night and fell four points behind the fourth-place Bruins in the fight for the final National Hockey League playoff berth. A double minor penalty to Rangers' Dean Prentice set up a 1-0 victory.

In the second NHL game played Saturday night, rookie Jean Beliveau sparked a third-period Montreal rally as the Canadiens came from behind a two-goal deficit to gain a 2-2 deadlock with Toronto Maple Leafs. The split in points left the clubs deadlocked for second place, seven points behind league-leading Detroit Red Wings.

EVENS SCORE

At Boston coach Lynn Patrick came out on top over Ranger coach Muzz Patrick for the second time in four meetings in the family "feud." Leo Labine scored the only goal, his 12th of the season, with the Rangers playing short-handed.

Prentice was given two minutes at 1.26 of the second period after a tiff with Bruin's Doug Mohns. The Rangers held out until 5.18.

A sensational goalkeeping display by Johnny Bower held the Rangers together as the rookie came through with 38 saves. Sugar Jim Henry was called upon to make 25 stops in earning his fifth shutout of the season.

PRESSURE PAYS OFF

Toronto held the edge in the first two periods before a sell-out crowd of 14,581 Maple Leaf Garden fans but wilted under Montreal pressure in the final session. Tim Horton scored for Leafs in the opening period and Pete Nesterenko put them two goals up early in the second session.

But Beliveau, who was flying all night, got one back on a brilliant effort and Elmer Lach tied it up at 9.44 with Beliveau and Bert Olmstead drawing assists.

Jacques Plante, called up from Buffalo Bisons of the American League, replaced Gerry McNeil in goal. McNeil suffered a badly sprained ankle in Thursday night's game and may miss tonight's contest against the Bruins.

Wanderers' Rally Misses As South Burnaby Wins

	GP	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
Victoria College I	7	7	0	0	75	14	14
University School	7	5	2	0	69	22	10
Shawnigan Lake	7	3	4	0	76	52	6
Victoria College II	8	1	5	0	33	92	2
O Bay Wanderers	7	1	6	0	25	97	2

Saturday's scores: Shawnigan Lake Boys' School 0 at Victoria College 19; University School won by default from Victoria College II.

South Burnaby held against a strong rally by Oak Bay Wanderers of the Victoria Rugby Union's Division I yesterday to grab a 9-8 decision before a sparse crowd at Macdonald Park.

WELL PLAYED

It was the first inter-city club match played here this season and, despite the soggy turf, the teams turned in a good exhibition of rugby. The Mainland club held a 6-5 edge at half time, made it 9-5 early in the second session before Wanderers came back with a rush and almost pulled out a victory.

Tommy McIlveen, who was loaned to South Burnaby because the winners were short-handed, and Fred Boyd scored unconverted tries in the first half while Dick Ellis converted a try by Ray Calton for the Wanderers.

SEVEN IN ROW

In Division II play, undefeated Victoria College I rolled to its seventh straight victory by blanking Shawnigan Lake Boys' School at Lower Macdonald Park, 9-0. University School kept pace, four points behind, by winning by default when Victoria College II couldn't field a full team. The clubs played an exhibition game with University School taking a 35-0 decision.

University School swept two matches from Shawnigan Lake Boys' School at University School grounds. Gordon McLean converted a try scored by Russ Chambers to give the colt team a 5-0 victory and tries by Andy Phillipson and Bruce Chambers gave the midget squad a 6-3 win. Freeman Ford scored for Shawnigan Lake.

In the other midget game played, Oak Bay Wanderers blanked St. Michael's, 10-0, at Windsor Park. McFarlane and Fraser each got one try and Jim Watson kicked two converts.

Fullback Star As All-Blacks Best Scotland

LONDON (Reuters) — New Zealand All-Blacks, sparked by full-back Bob Scott, beat Scotland 3-0 today in an international Rugby Union match at Murrayfield.

Scott capped a great display on a muddy field with a penalty goal, to chalk up the only points scored. Scotland, which has lost its last 13 games, was far above expectations, particularly in the pack.

England downed Ireland 14-3 in today's other international Rugby Union match, at Twickenham.

The win puts England in line for the triple crown, having defeated Wales and Ireland.

Only Scotland stands in England's way—and judging by today's match at Murrayfield, England will not have an easy time when the two teams meet.

Turner Gets Split Call Over Panter

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Clean punching Jesse Turner of St. Louis won a split 10-round decision over Garth Panter of Salt Lake City in a slugging match at the Salt Lake Fairgrounds Saturday night.

The fight was a wild battle from the first round with each fighter in trouble several times. Turner had Panter almost out in the final minutes of th 10th round when he cut the bulling Salt Laker repeatedly with uppercuts and ovehand smashes to the head while standing with his own back in against the ropes.

Referee Al Ablett scored it 93-91 for Turner; Judge Ken Shulsen had it 94-93 for Turner, and Judge Milo Nickey had it 95-90 for Panter.

Both fighters weighed 157½.

The Sportlight

BY GRANTLAND RICE

With the death of Battling Nelson in Chicago, the durability has been eliminated even from the Durable Dane. And, in his time, Bat was the most durable of them all.

Taking no credit for gameness from The Battler, I always had an idea that his system was so equipped that he never felt pain. There are people like that.

I got this idea from several incidents in Bat's early career. When he fought young Corbett, conqueror of Terry McGovern, the second time, Bat told me how he had crossed Corbett.

"We were slugging away," Bat said, "until he caught me with a right hand over the heart. He not only knocked me down, but he broke two ribs. He must have thought he had nearly killed me. It didn't hurt at all. I jumped right up and hit him on the law and knocked him out. It was the same punch, I think, that he had knocked out McGovern with. It didn't even hurt me."

"How about the broken ribs?" I asked.

"They didn't hurt, either," Bat replied.

I was working in Cleveland around 1906. Nelson used to drop in once in a while to talk things over. He was very playful. His "playfulness" consisted in slipping up behind you and belting you across the back of the neck.

Bat had a fight in or near Cleveland one day and I happened to notice an injured finger on his right hand. It was badly swollen, almost double size. It was purple, blue, green and crimson — I never saw a worse-looking digit.

"You can't fight with that finger," I told him.

Bat laughed. "It's nothing," he said. Then he began punching his right hand against his left as hard as he could hit. "It isn't even sore," he added. "It's just 'swolled'."

So I asked him—"Did you ever feel any pain? You've taken many a punch. Didn't any of them ever hurt you?"

"I was only hurt once in my life," Bat replied. "When I was about six years old, a miner got mad at me about something and hit me on the head with a crowbar. He split the scalp and raised a knot. I had a headache for a half hour. A crowbar could do it. How can you get hurt being hit by a glove?"

Bat's last fight—his battle with Ad Wolgast — was the most ferocious ever fought. Blood was running down Nelson's head and face. He was totally blinded. He stalked Wolgast, poking for his face with both hands to find the target hidden in the red mist.

The title went to Wolgast in the fourth round, but the blinded, bloody Nelson was still on his feet, groping for his antagonist.

Bat told me once that the hardest he had ever been hit was by Aurelio Herrera, the Mexican. "He hit on the point of the chin with a full right," Nelson said. "That was in the fifth round. They tell me I turned over in the air and landed on my head. I don't know. For it wasn't until the 17th round that I came to. My head cleared and I won the fight."

Battling Nelson could take more punishment without being weakened than any other fighter that ever lived. Incidentally, he admitted to one other hurt in the ring. "In my second fight with Joe Gans," said Bat, "he hit me in the side with a right hand. I thought he had stuck a knife in me. I wanted to cry, it hurt so."

PCAHA To Set Playdown Dates

A special meeting of the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey Association will be held at Kerrisdale Arena today at 2 p.m. to set playoff dates in bantam, midget, juvenile and junior divisions.

It will also be decided at the meeting whether the Free Press Trophy, emblematic of Pacific Coast intermediate supremacy, will be up for competition this year. The trophy will be played for if there are enough entries in that division.

Boucher Lashes Out at Irvin; '....Biggest Cry-Baby in NHL'

NEW YORK (BUP) — Manager Frank Boucher of the New York Rangers has described coach Dick Irvin of the Montreal Canadiens as the greatest cry-baby in the National Hockey League."

Asked if he agreed with Irvin's opinion that Gordie Howe of the Detroit Red Wings draws too many "paper assists" on his home ice, Boucher barked:

"Certainly not. That's the way Irvin looks at it, and he's all wet. He's the greatest cry-baby in the National Hockey League."

Earlier, Irvin had called Maurice Richard of the Canadiens "the greatest player in the game," and pointed out "Howe never would be leading the league if they had an impartial scorer at Detroit."

Boucher explained that in his playing days he, too, was accused of gaining "paper assists" in games at New York.

"But I've always maintained my assists were earned, whether they were at home or away from home, and the same applies today to Howe."

The Ranger brass also attacked Irvin for a recent statement that he hates to play the Rangers "because they're always injuring our best players."

"What Irvin neglects to point out," said a Ranger spokesman, "is that the Rangers lost Leo Reise in an early game at Montreal last season. We also had guys out of the line-up like Bones Raleigh and Dean Prentice, but you didn't hear us cry.

"Then last Sunday night the Canadiens had Dollard St. Laurent injured in a game at Madison Square Garden. They're in second place, they win the game, and still Irvin has something to cry about."

"Irvin's got nothing to cry about," the Ranger spokesman added. "He's carrying a lodestone under each arm."

Casey Takes It on Chin As Lane in Verbal Swing

CHICAGO (AP) — Frank Lane, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, heated up his running verbal feud with Casey Stengel Saturday, accusing the New York Yankee pilot of sticking his nose in other people's business.

"Stengel's job is so easy he not only has time to run his own business but other club's business as well," chided Lane.

What started the latest skirmish was a New York newspaper story that charged Lane with tampering in his effort to get third baseman Andy Carey from the Yankees.

"I merely expressed interest in a player the Yankees may want to trade," said Lane. "I've had another recent talk with George Weiss (Yankee general manager), and I now know there isn't a chance for Carey because Billy Martin may soon be back in the service.

"All this stuff about tampering sounds like Stengel. He's getting too big for his britches. He thinks he's the biggest brain in baseball. I think he's mad because the Sox recently gave me a new 7-year contract and Stengel's is only for a year."

Lane said Weiss is the brain behind the team and has put together the material that makes Stengel's job a breeze.

TELLING BLOW

"Weiss gets 'em and all Stengel has to do is put them into the line-up," Lane added. "I would like to see what Stengel would do with a team like Pittsburgh, for instance. He wasn't such a genius when he had the Boston Braves or Brooklyn, was he?

"He wasn't feeling his oats too well in those days. Now he's looking around for someone to punch the bag with. The ball club makes the manager; the manager doesn't make the ball club.

"Stengel reminds me of an actor who has been playing the part of a clown with success and now wants to play Hamlet."

Stengel recently needled the Sox official about the team's third base problem, wanted to know why Lane has failed to fill that spot satisfactorily in his five years as general manager.

"Stengel said I've tried 16 guys at third base," replied Lane. "Well, he's tried 17 at first base."

Golf--- Here's How

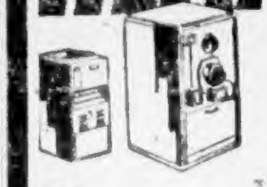

BY SAM SNEAD

Several letters from readers indicate uncertainty as to how the backswing is made. Perhaps today's picture will make it clearer. For about six or eight inches back of the ball you swing the clubhead along the imaginary direction line to the green. As your hip pivot gets under way the shoulder pivot follows. The pivot carries the club inside of the direction line as pictured. The clubhead continues upward in this plane. When the hands are head high the plane of the swing is about 30 degrees from perpendicular. If the plane of the backswing is more than 35 degrees you're swinging flat. Notice that when the hands are nearing hip-high your left arm and clubshaft still form a straight line. Then, when the hands are hip high, the cocking action of the wrists slowly starts but your hands do not reach the fully cocked position until you are at the top of the backswing. At that time your hands are head high and are directly above your right shoulder. When you're in that position your hips will have pivoted about 45 degrees from their positions when you are addressing the ball and your shoulders will have pivoted about 90 degress from their position at the address.

Pre-Peeled Potatoes Do Well For Some Uses Despite Cost

Another wrinkle in this trend toward pre-package merchandising of produce is the pre-peeled potato. Although not yet marketed extensively in retail outlets, they are well established for use in institutions in some parts of the United States. Restaurateurs find it good business, according to a recent article in Market Growers' Journal, to pay four to six cents a pound above the price of unpeeled potatoes, since the pre-peeled potatoes save labor and purchase of equipment, save storage space, reduce the amount of garbage handled, are always available, particularly French-fry sizes, have their peeling loss always paid in advance and therefore always known, are of better quality than ordinary unpeeled potatoes and are purchased at a more stable price throughout the year than is possible in the ordinary market which fluctuates from day to day.

Whether pre-peeling will ever become a widespread practice in the retail outlets is for the future to determine but this development seems to fall in line with modern marketing trends.

Anyone that has a strawberry patch is interested in knowing how to produce two berries where only one was produced before. This, of course, is a difficult thing to do. However, from time to time we all find little tricks that help improve yields. It may be that we lose more ... with our watering or fertilizing or trimming off runners at the proper time and so on.

BERRY TEST

An experiment being conducted at the station under ... land conditions is giving some interesting information. The 1953 average yields are as follows:

Two inches continuous sawdust mulch, ... tons per acre; one inch of sawdust incorporated annually, 4.08 tons; two tons per acre of straw incorporated annually, 3.53 tons; 20 cubic yards per acre of compost incorporated annually, 3.56 tons; 20 cubic yards per acre of manure incorporated annually, 3.74 tons; check (no fertilizer), 3.03 tons.

Plants in the sawdust mulch and sawdust incorporated plots gave the highest yields. The other treatments gave slightly increased yields over the check. The moisture conserved by the sawdust treatments accounted for most of the increased yield. The maturity of the berries was not affected. One disadvantage is that sawdust tends to cling to the berries and is undesirable in this respect.

Chart Shows Salary Needs For New Home

OTTAWA (CP)—A prospective home owner planning to build a $10,000 home likely will have to earn $3,650 a year before he can qualify for a maximum loan under the government's new housing legislation.

This was indicated in a down payment-earnings chart submitted by D. B. Mansur, president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, at a meeting of the Commons banking committee.

The chart was based on purchase of a new house costing $10,000, carrying a 25-year mortgage loan, taxed at $200 a year and carrying a two per cent mortgage insurance fee.

SERVICE CHARGE

The chart also is based on the buyer's ... 23 per cent of the debt service charge. Mr. Mansur said this 23 per cent ratio is not fixed by law, but is a CMHC "guide" which the mortgage lenders can follow.

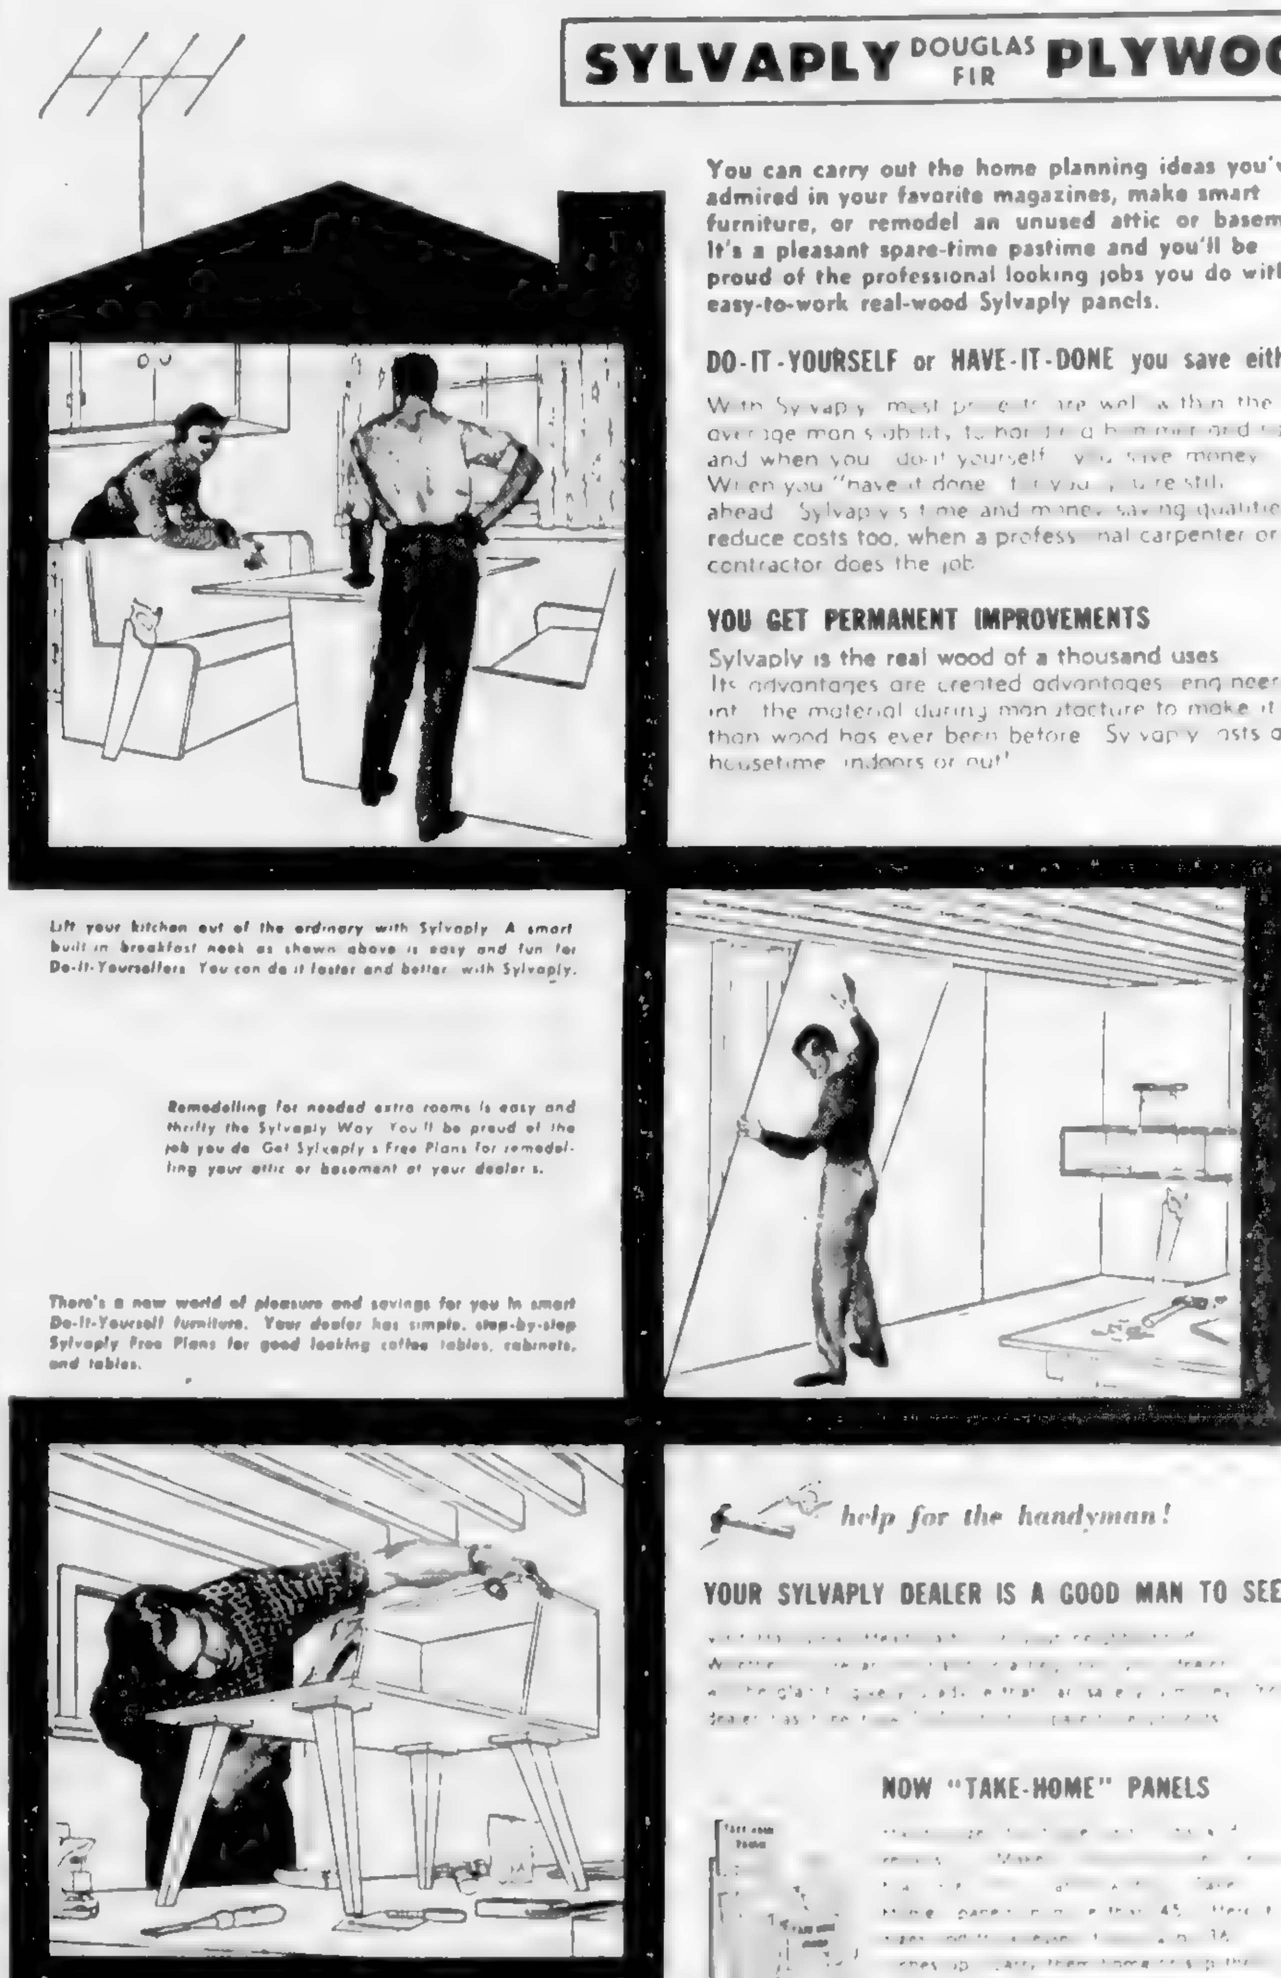

In other words, the earnings must be such that not more than 23 per cent equals the monthly repayment requirements including taxes and interest.

The chart figures ... are based on an interest rate of 5½ per cent. It likely will be in that neighborhood.

... wanting to buy a $10,000 house to which is added the mortgage insurance costs, and having only $1,100 for a down payment would have to earn $3,650 a year to get the maximum loan of $8,772.

A SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY

Adventure of Wisteria Lodge

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Published by arrangement with the estate of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. World rights reserved. [illegible] King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER I

MAN OF LETTERS

"I suppose, Watson, we must look upon you as a man of letters," said he. "How do you define the word 'grotesque'?" [illegible]

[illegible]

"Think of that little affair of the red-headed men. That was grotesque enough in the outset, and yet it ended in a desperate attempt at robbery. Or, again, there was that most grotesque affair of the five orange pips, which led straight to a murderous conspiracy. The words puts me on the alert."

[illegible]

"Post Office, Charing Cross [illegible]

[illegible] She would have come."

GREATLY BORED

"My dear Watson, you know how bored I have been [illegible] Can you ask me, then, whether I am ready to look into any new problem, however trivial it may prove? But here, unless I am mistaken, is our client."

A measured step was heard upon the stairs, and a moment later a stout, tall, grey-whiskered and solemnly respectable person was ushered into the room. His life history was written in his heavy features and pompous manner. From his spats to his gold-rimmed spectacles he was a Conservative, a churchman, a good citizen, orthodox and conventional to the last degree. But some amazing experience had disturbed his native composure and left its traces in his bristling hair, his flushed, angry cheeks, and his flurried, excited manner. He plunged instantly into his business.

"I have had a most singular and unpleasant experience, Mr. Holmes," said he. "Never in my life have I been placed in such a situation. [illegible]"

[illegible] "May I ask in the first place why you came to me at all?"

NOT FOR POLICE

"Well, sir, it did not appear to be a matter which concerned the police, and yet, when you have heard the facts, you must admit that I could not leave it where it was. Private detectives are a class with whom I have absolutely no sympathy, but [illegible] [illegible] why did you not come at once?"

"What do you mean?"

Holmes glanced at his watch. "It is a quarter-past two," he said. "Your telegram was dispatched about one. But no one can glance at your toilet and attire without seeing that your disturbance dates from the moment of your waking."

Our client smoothed down his unbrushed hair and felt his unshaven chin.

"You are right, Mr. Holmes. [illegible] I went to the house agents, you know, and they said that Mr. Garcia's rent was paid up all right and that everything was in order at Wisteria Lodge."

"Come, come, sir," said Holmes, laughing. "You are like my friend Dr. Watson, who has a bad habit of telling his stories wrong end foremost. Please let me know, in their due sequence, exactly what those events are which have sent you out unbrushed and unkempt, with dress boots and waistcoat buttoned awry."

RUEFUL FACE

Our client looked down with a rueful face at his own unconventional appearance.

"I'm sure it must look very bad, Mr. Holmes; now I will tell [illegible] the whole queer business."

But his narrative was nipped in the bud. There was a bustle outside, and Mrs. Hudson opened the door to usher in two robust individuals, one of whom was well known to us as Inspector Gregson of Scotland Yard, an energetic, gallant, and, within his limitations, a capable officer. He shook hands with Holmes and introduced his comrade as Inspector Baynes, of the Surrey Constabulary.

[illegible]

"I am."

"We have been following you about all the morning."

[illegible]

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

[illegible]

"We want a statement, Mr. Scott Eccles, as to the events which led up to the death last night of Mr. Aloysius Garcia, of Wisteria Lodge, near Esher."

Our client had sat up with [illegible] "Dead? Did you say he was dead?"

"Yes, sir, he is dead."

"But how? An accident?"

"Murder, if ever there was one upon earth."

"Good God! This is awful! You don't mean—you don't mean that I am suspected?"

"A letter of yours was found in the dead man's pocket, and we know by it that you had planned to pass last night at his house."

"So I did."

"Oh, you did, did you?"

Out came the official notebook.

"Wait a bit, Gregson," said Sherlock Holmes. "All you desire is a plain statement, is it not?"

[illegible]

"Mr. Eccles was going to tell us about it when you entered the room. I think, Watson, [illegible] I suggest that you proceed with your narrative."

My favorite character is Terry Moore [illegible] the controversial white outfit she wore to entertain troops in Korea two months ago.

Twentieth Century Fox studio [illegible] white ermine shorts [illegible] Al Teitelbaum copied the suit in the pool girl—ermine white rabbit, and Terry furnished the white angora fur mittens, black mesh stockings and white boots she wore with the famous bathing suit.

I felt chilly and bare but the suit got attention. Terry Moore by proxy danced with millionaire George Hormel, Robert Taylor and an unknown Hungarian artist pal of Tsa Zsa's.

According to other costumes, Hollywood's favorite character is producer Howard Hughes. [illegible] showed up in dirty tennis shoes and sport [illegible].

Talk Slated On Planning In Esquimalt

W. J. Watson, head of the lower Fraser Valley Regional Planning Board, will speak to Esquimalt Council Monday at 7 p.m.

He is to outline functions of the proposed regional board for Greater Victoria.

The municipal council is expected to favor the commencement of such a board.

Graphic Arts Society Exhibit Has Good Range, Flexibility

Lithography is ably represented in the work of Ara Bayefsky, Raquel Eevis, Frederick Hagan, and others; etching by Louis Parent; wood-engraving by Julius Griffith and lino block printing by Bruno Bobak.

FINE DRAWINGS

Trends Varied On Markets

By Canadian Press

Watching this week's stock market activity was like trying to see everything in a three ring circus.

Montreal activity followed a steady pattern as it gained steadily but Toronto and New York observers had to keep track of several simultaneous performances.

In the Toronto industrial rise papers steels and foods led off Monday as they sparked a general drive. Then refining oils took the lead and put the group in its highest position since September 1952.

Banks were ahead with sufficient strength to carry the group for another advance.

Thursday was slower although the banks were slightly ahead and liquors broke a recent quiet spell. Friday's industrial session was slow.

Refining oils gained and a few isolated moves produced several good changes.

Western oils were steadily stronger. Golds and base metals were strong for the first time this year.

The Friday-to-Friday Toronto comparisons showed industrials up 1.90 at 327.58, golds up 2.98 at 71.36, base metals up 1.71 at 140.70 and Western oils up 1.46 at 95.37.

New York's activity was on a rising note. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 20 cents at 111.90.

Montreal's industrial activity was steady and upward. Steels were strong early, then papers and utilities took the lead and utilities and metals were leading at the close.

The Friday-to-Friday comparison showed banks up .26 at 37.76, utilities up .8 at 97.7, industrials up .6 at 187.3, combined up .6 at 158.1, papers up .680 at 831.79 and golds up 2.32 at 54.31.

Changeover to Estate Tax Opposed

BY HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

A suggestion that the government of Canada might replace its present succession duty on estates by an estate tax is opposed by O. B. Thornton, president of the Montreal Trust Company.

In his annual address to shareholders Mr. Thornton said that Canada needed a new succession duty act that would be realistic and fair to all.

One method was the estate tax which would be levied on a percentage of the value of the estate. The other was the succession duty or inheritance tax which is levied on the property passing to a beneficiary with no regard to the size of the estate.

The advocates of the estate tax stress the advantages of simplicity of administration, but ignore the principle of providing a measure of relief in those cases which merit special consideration.

"It would be the widows and children of the men of modest means who would suffer most from an estate tax," said Mr. Thornton. "I firmly believe that the taxes on these estates should be reduced in recognition of the needs of the heirs and their close relationship to the deceased."

He said that if the administration of a succession duty threatened to be too heavy it could be lightened at negligible expense by raising the basic exemption which is now $50,000.

CANADA AT PEAK?

Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada in his annual report to the Commons made some pertinent remarks on Canada's economy.

While he noted that 1953 had been a record year in economic activity with the national production up 3½ per cent at a total of $24,200,000,000 the tempo was definitely slowing toward the end of the period.

The stockpile of unsold goods in stores and on farms began to climb. As the year closed employment did not keep pace with the annual increase in the labor force.

Consumer spending was $15,000,000,000 up $700,000,000 and consumer prices averaged 99 per cent of the 1952 level.

COLD ON THE WAY

The people of the mining town of Yellowknife — not to mention their automobiles — must be mighty tough.

The current copy of the Yellowknife paper, the News of the North, carries an advertisement by a local automobile firm: "Why not consult our specialists on preparing it (the car) for the cold weather that's coming so soon?"

On the same page, two columns to the right, appears the Yellowknife temperature table for January.

It shows the minimum temperature was 54.9 below and the maximum 9.1 above. On only three days in the month did the temperature rise above zero, and on no day was the temperature less than 12 below at some period of the 24 hours.

But wait till February. Brrrrh!

AUTO INDUSTRY LEADS

The automobile industry is making a claim to being the biggest single element in the economic life of Canada.

E. C. Row, president of Chrysler Corporation of Canada points out that the value added by manufacture of cars manufactured in Canada in 1952 was greater than the total of all the wheat produced.

VOLUME BEATS FAILURES

In the United States last year business failures in dollar amounts were the largest in 20 years.

But the firm of Dun and Bradstreet does not recommend this to be taken as a danger signal.

It points out that while the failure volume is higher so too is business higher than it has been in the past 20 years.

Twenty years ago, according to Dun and Bradstreet, failure liabilities equalled $8,000 for every $1,000,000 of goods and services produced. In 1953 the failure liabilities amounted to only $4,000 per $1,000,000 of goods and services.

The failure rate of 32 out of 10,000 firms in 1953 is also significantly lower than the average annual rate of 76 per 10,000 concerns in the first half of the century.

Domestic Copper Demand Up from Four-Year Low

NEW YORK (AP) Domestic demand for copper is improving this month after touching a four-year low point in January. Meanwhile, zinc output has been cut further by one of the largest producers.

The Copper Institute announced that shipments of copper to domestic fabricators in January totaled only 77,091 tons, the smallest monthly total since July 1949. Stocks of the metal held by producers at the end of January mounted to 108,121 tons, the highest since December, 1949.

Although domestic shipments were low last month, foreign producers shipped 92,277 tons to users abroad, the best for any month since April, 1952.

The St. Joseph Lead Company, one of the first to slash zinc production late last year, announced a further reduction last week. It has curtailed output at its Josephtown, Pa., smelter by 1,500 tons a month.

Zinc demand continued at a slow pace. Producers have record stocks on hand.

There was a sizable drop in lead purchases. Foreign demand slipped and London prices were substantially below the domestic quotation of 13 cents a pound, New York.

Major metals prices:

Copper 29.50 to 30 cents a pound delivered. Foreign 29 to 30 cents New York.
Lead 13 cents a pound New York, 12.80 cents St. Louis.
Zinc 9.50 cents a pound East St. Louis, 10 cents New York.
Aluminum 21.50 cents a pound, primary pig 20 cents.
Nickel 48 cents a pound, electrolytic.
Antimony Far Eastern 17.8 cents a pound New York.
Platinum $90 to $92 an ounce.

War Rages for U.S. Rails; Canadian Interests Hinted

NEW YORK (AP) A titanic financial war for mastery of $3,000,000,000 of railroad properties is under way.

The stakes are the New York Central Railroad, worth $2,500,000,000, and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, a $500,000,000 enterprise.

The struggle is reminiscent of giant combats waged in the 19th and early 20th Centuries by such legendary railroad magnates as Jay Gould, Jim Fisk, E. H. Harriman and James J. Hill.

The ghost of "Commodore" Cornelius Vanderbilt, who founded the Central system nearly 100 years ago, must be cocking a canny eye at the present fracas. For blood kin of the old commodore still sit on the embattled Central board, the descendants Harold S. Vanderbilt and William H. Vanderbilt.

Now they are challenged by a firebrand out of the West, Robert R. Young, Texas-born financier.

This time, with unparalleled audacity Young issued an ultimatum which virtually amounted to:

"Make me boss or I'll throw you all out."

The Central board of directors Wednesday issued its reply. Behind the polite verbiage it added up to one word:

"No."

Then the shouts of defiance began to ring out from Young and from his sturdy opponent, William White, New York Central president.

Young said he would launch his proxy fight culminating in the Central's annual stockholders' meeting May 26 at Albany, N.Y. White retorted that he and the Central board would fight back.

On the New York Stock Exchange the next morning trading in Central stock opened with a huge block of 30,000 shares at $23 a share, up $1.37 from the day before, and the stock started soaring. The war was on.

The votes will be in the form of proxies representing shares of stock. They will be cast for two slates of directors, one representing Young, the other representing the present Central management.

The proxy fight for control of the New York, New Haven and Hartford is overshadowed by the gigantic struggle for the Central, but is of great moment to millions of people on the Eastern Seaboard.

The New Haven operates 1,792 miles of railroad interlacing the heavily populated manufacturing areas of southern New England in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The main line is from New York, through New Haven and Providence to Boston.

Here again, the struggle is focussed on two men. One is Frederic C. Dumaine, president of the New Haven. His foe is Patrick B. McGinnis, New York stock broker.

This, too, is a renewal of an old contest between two rival groups.

The bugles sounded when the New Haven announced February 3 it was dropping seven of its present 21-man board of directors. Among them were four named to the board a year ago in a compromise to avert a proxy fight for control of the road.

The four dropped were members of the McGinnis group. Earlier in February Dumaine said that two strong groups, one from Canada and one from New York City, identified as the McGinnis interests, sought further representation on the board.

Representative Donald Nicholson (D., Mass.) denounced this group on the floor of Congress last week, saying it would be "a disastrous day" in New England when the New Haven is operated by "absentee investors" in Hamilton, Ont.

McGinnis could not be reached for comment and his office declined to elaborate on Representative Nicholson's reference to Hamilton.

Mining Notes

Prosperity and progress were enjoyed last year by Steep Rock with output of 1,500,000 tons of iron ore. Shipments this year are expected to reach 2,000,000 tons and the 1956 objective of 4,000,000 tons appears attainable.

Lun-Echo was financed with $750,00.

Beaucage has pulled its best drill core yet.

Roy Silver mill is operating.

New flow sheets will eliminate penalties incurred by phosphorous and copper content in shipments to U.S. by Western Tungsten (B.C.).

Silver-Miller has sold 2,000,000 pounds of cobalt concentrates to the Canadian government. Delivery will be between April 1954 and November, 1955.

Willroy's first drill has cut 18 feet true width of reportedly good looking copper ore. From sale of 800,000 shares it was financed with $370,000.

Burnt Hill Tungsten is drifting in ore averaging 35 per cent tungsten.

Due to low lead-zinc prices Western Mines (B.C.) has suspended to conserve assets.

Estimated six feet true width, a drill core from 1,60 feet depth at Cons. Discovers averaged 8.20 ounces gold, $287 a ton. Milling 101 tons daily, its proved reserves at the end of 1953 were 27,914 tons, averaging 1.13 ounces gold, $11.65 a ton.

Drastic cuts of production by lead-zinc refineries with subsequent reduction of concentrates receivable from shippers is causing difficulties at Sunshine Lardeau (B.C.), which may suspend operations.

British Economy Booms While Americans Fret

LONDON (UP) While Americans are arguing whether there is a recession Britain's economy is booming.

Production and employment are at record levels despite a drop in trade with the United States.

Stocks are rising— toward record highs.

Vital British exports to the United States slumped 10 per cent in the last three months of 1953 but figures published in the last few days show the British economy is strengthening. Things have seldom been so good.

This is what the figures show:

Employment was at an all-time high in the closing months of last year. Unemployment is less than at the same time last year despite the seasonal increase.

Steel production last month was the highest for January in history.

Over-all production was steadily climbing, according to the latest available statistics for late 1953.

Farmers set new production records last year for wheat, barley, oats, potatoes and turnips.

Industrial bond and share prices are just short of the all time record set in 1947.

Wages as recorded by the official index have climbed 12 points since Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill's government took office in 1951. Prices have climbed 11 points.

Last November the British working force reached a record total of 22,400,000 out of a population of about 50,000,000. That is the highest in history and after a seasonal decline in December it was still a record total for that time of the year.

The last figures show that on January 11 the number of registered unemployed was 372,000 which was 52,000 below the same time in 1952.

Steel production last month was at the record high rate of 18,737,000 tons a year while the index for over-all industrial production recovered from a 152 slump by climbing from 118 in January 1953, to 132 last November.

Total coal production for this year is running slightly behind that of last year but miners agreed when they obtained 1 would be reasonable to try to increase production by an extra 5,000,000 tons.

Wheat production was up 16 per cent, barley up 11 per cent, oats up 7 per cent, potatoes up 8 per cent and fodder roots as a whole up 17 per cent.

One place in the city business was bad. The lunch counters and coffee shops around the stock exchange, where brokers in their bowler hats and striped pants used to lunch leisurely, now report customers only grab a sandwich and run.

Horses Have Uses, Weyerhaeuser Finds

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) Back in the days when a new-fangled invention known as the automobile first sputtered and stalled on a dusty village street someone always called out the classic gag.

Get a horse.

That's just what the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. has done.

But it's no gag with Weyerhaeuser. Horses are being assigned to unique jobs on the vast St. Helens tree farm where modern machines were ruled out for conservation reasons.

Veteran woodsmen who believed horse logging had faded with the era of skid roads and ox teams are enthusiastic about the novel operation.

Here's what Clyde Orman, [illegible] Longview branch has to say about it:

"Horses were brought into use by Weyerhaeusers originally for thinning work. But during the winter they've been salvaging in the lower areas.

"Since we started this program we have found that additional wood could be obtained to further demonstrate the worth of the project. Proper thinning has increased the possible cut in a growing cycle of a stand of timber tremendously by giving the trees a chance to grow under the best conditions, and removes other timber which normally dies and is lost."

Currently the company is using 15 horses belonging to five contractors. These include two crews near Camp Baker, one more on the south fork of the Lewis River and one crew on Outrander Creek.

Horse logging of more certain yarding was started a year ago by Weyerhaeuser to save the young growing trees.

Savage Douglas fir 10 inches and more in diameter is trucked to the Longview branch cargo dock and rafted in the Columbia River for convenient handling.

Smaller fir logs and other species from four to 20 inches in diameter and from eight to 24 feet long are routed to the small log barker at the Longview plant for pulp production.

[illegible] experimented first with small tractors. But the machines crushed infant trees and roots and were judged too destructive.

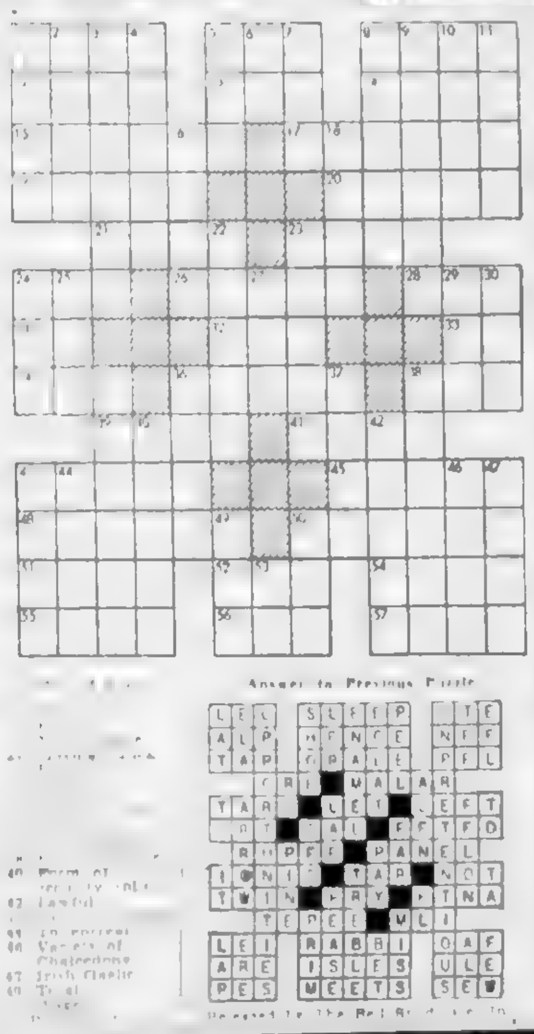

Then a rancher's horse was tried and within a few weeks the operation was expanded with other contractors. The heavy horses are usually in the 1,000-pound weight class and work individually except where two are needed to tug larger logs to the truck landings.

Weyerhaeuser foresters said more than 2,500 acres of timber land will be thinned this year.

STAMP PACKET

by R. M. ANGUS

A fourpenny New Zealand stamp will be issued at the post office in Edinburgh, Scotland, which appears to be a duplicate of a similar issue, except that it is surrounded by other designs. It consists of a narrow rectangle of the Union Jack, with the words "Edinburgh, Scotland" and "New Zealand" in the corners. Collectors locally are wondering whether it has been the result of an error, or even a joke. Apparently, nevertheless, it has a place in every specialized collection of New Zealand, and will always command a good price but not, as one dealer says, "as much as London Value or anywhere near it. Maybe the nearer the mark. Position on the plate is so far not definitely fixed if known.

Hansen of 'The Flying Dutchman'

THE Flying Dutchman, the ghostly matter reported by sailor lore to sound forever around the Horn, had its counterpart, according to legend, in the Gulf of Georgia, where Captain Gus Hansen, the Flying Dutchman, lived in the cluttered cabin of a sailing schooner moored in James Bay basin in Victoria harbor.

Hansen drinks to played his part and talked of attempted murder, the seal hookers of the Queen Charlotte Islands, and the Commissioner of West Coast Fisheries, locally are known as Mr. Kyuquot, B.C., he was accused of trial charged with breaking and entering a hut in the Indian village. Captain Hansen, master of the sloop Wilhelmina, pleaded guilty to the charge, nevertheless, and was fined $100 and costs. Constable Spain the prosecutor. It was a witnesses spoke mostly in the local dialect or Chinook, which was slowly interpreted and Hansen well primed interject frequent remarks. When the witnesses admitted the hut was not locked or bolted, door had been broken, failed and the charges that Hansen was a frequent and welcome visitor that of entering fell away.

HONORED CHIEF

Hansen was buried at Kyuquot. A totem marks his grave. He was drowned when making gallant efforts to rescue shipwrecked seamen of the Chilian bark Libertad. The Kyuquots, where friendship for Dan was never buried him with the rites of the race. He had gone to Kyuquot a few years before, after being struck by a prospectors tale of gold, told to him. He built a fine home, and was made chief of the tribe, a title he held until his death.

DESERTS SHIPS

Hansen, who had been a master of sailing ships, deserted his ship in Victoria harbor to go to Kyuquot. He was popular with the Indians, and was known as a fine navigator. He was a familiar figure in Victoria harbor, where he was often seen walking with his dog. He was a bachelor.

Hansen's ship, the Wilhelmina, was built in Victoria in 1913 by Captain Hansen. He was master of the vessel for many years

The Story of the Bicycle

By JOAN SPENCE

[illegible]

EVERY boy and girl loves a bicycle. They might prefer a motor car or even a space ship, but as these are beyond the reach of children (and of many grown-ups, too), they long for a bicycle either as a present or to buy out of their first earnings.

Nobody seems to know the number of bicycles in the world — there must be [illegible] Britain [illegible] cycles than any other country [illegible] has exported [illegible] 000 in a year.

And what [illegible] colorful [illegible] with their chromium [illegible] brightly painted [illegible] [illegible] night [illegible] speeds, carriers on the [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] 60 years [illegible] [illegible] in a London [illegible]

no pedals [illegible] resembled [illegible] gravings on [illegible] dating back to the [illegible] and [illegible] needed by a [illegible] pole or bar. On [illegible] at [illegible]

It is said [illegible] London "man-about-town" [illegible] on one of these [illegible] tion but fell off [illegible] nearly run over [illegible] carriage [illegible] before [illegible] vented [illegible] says [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] were [illegible] of metal [illegible] wood [illegible] comfortable and noisy as [illegible] rattled and rocked over the [illegible] roads [illegible] those days. Small wonder that the cycle of the [illegible]

tury was called the "bone-shaker."

RUBBER TIRES

Pneumatic tires were not invented for more than another half-century but there were improvements even before then. Metal replaced wood for the frame, then for the wheels. Comparatively light metal rims and wire spokes were made in [illegible] then frames were made of hollow metal tube instead of solid rods or bars [illegible] [illegible] weight [illegible] were fitted at about the same time.

[illegible] there were [illegible] improvements. As metal workers [illegible] became more skilful [illegible] became still lighter [illegible] [illegible] and the open frames had been invented which enabled women to mount and dismount easily and ride without needing [illegible]

later, [illegible] safer at an important time for motor cars were becoming numerous and it was doubly necessary for cyclists to be able to stop smoothly and quickly.

[illegible] became popular. In 1882 a [illegible] rode 20 miles in one hour, a speed which many could equal nowadays with a [illegible] cycle on a good road. In America in 1896 a racing [illegible] went to great trouble [illegible] to have a track [illegible] [illegible] were [illegible] to [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible]

The fastest [illegible] are 50 [illegible] in one hour [illegible] after an hour. But greater speeds have been reached on tracks.

When "paced," that is riding on a track behind a car or motorcycle fitted with screens (like the train described above) to cause a partial vacuum, a rider has covered 42 miles in one hour. There is also an unofficial and fantastic record of a paced cyclist who achieved by this means a speed of 108 miles an hour, but only, of course, for a very short distance.

What the ordinary cyclist is [illegible] light weight, long-wearing machine at a fair price, and that is where British cycles score. [illegible] cycles were made in Britain last year, and of these 2,250,000 were exported, nearly five times as many as the rate of export before the war. The Commonwealth countries are among the biggest buyers. West Africa [illegible] rate of [illegible] a year.

Victoria Once Popular Place For Big Time Show Troupes

By FRANK KELLEY

HAVING a merited reputation for being a "good show town" among the elite of the theatre in the nineties, it was not difficult to book any aggregation for the Victoria Theatre, then on the western circuit of U.S. cities, which included Denver, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Mainly that was all done through booking agents in New York. The main travelling troupes, however, playing one or more nights, with maybe a Wednesday or Saturday matinee, asked about the same prices as movie theatres now but did not cater particularly to family groups. Most noted thespians of the time in the U.S. theatre during the nineties played at the Old Vic like Richard Mansfield, John Drew, Robert Mantell, Frederick Warde, Tom Keene, Alexander Salvini, Mrs. D. B. Bowers, Florence Roberts, Louis Morrison, Mrs. John Drew, Sol Smith Russel, Joe Grismer, Kyrle Bellew, Mrs. Fiske, Georgie Drew Barrymore

Louis Belmour, who played heavies and characters with Belmour-Gray Company at Philharmonic Hall and Helena Modjeska. There were great singers in concert like Pol Planson, the de Reskes, Sembrich, Melba and Albani, pianists like Paderwiski, violinists like Ysaye, bands like Sousa's and Gilmores, minstrel shows like Primrose and West, and light opera companies like Carl Rosa and Grau singing pieces like "Chimes of Normandy" and "Martha".

STOCK DEMAND

At that, those presentations [illegible] a taste for the stock company vogue, popular drama at prices the average family [illegible] could afford at the time. What might be called abortive [illegible] attempts along this [illegible] were made from time to [illegible] appealing to a [illegible] family [illegible] six nights a week with a Saturday matinee for the [illegible] element. One [illegible] [illegible] was the Belmour-Gray Company [illegible] of Victorians [illegible] with a week [illegible] stayed several [illegible] at Philharmonic Hall [illegible] of Fort Street between Douglas and Broad [illegible]. There was [illegible] from becoming [illegible] with that organization in a [illegible] way, playing paint brush and hammer as well as walking on [illegible] juvenile part occasionally.

Members of the Belmour-Gray group while here made many friends among the town's theatregoers. The company had a large repertoire of the more popular plays favored by stock-playing organizations, ranging from costume pieces like "The Lady of Lyon," to more melodramatic offerings like "Shadows of a Great City," with in between selections such as "Hazel Kirke," "East Lynn," "Kathleen Mavourneen," but no classics.

STRONG CAST

Leading man was Frank Armstrong, heavy was Louis Belmour, comedian Charles Gray, leading lady Kate Dalgleish, wife of comedian Gray. It also boasted one of the most versatile character actresses to appear locally with any company, Margaret Marshall. Every one of that group's presentations was carefully staged with appropriate costumes and period stage settings. Flats, wings, drops and borders were especially made to represent both interiors and exteriors. I then travelled [illegible] as one got a bit of experience applying "washes" and getting canvas surfaces in shape for the artists' finishing touches.

Another hall used for amateur dramatics in the 1890's and later was [illegible] Hall situated on View Street where the [illegible] residence is at present. It was there the [illegible] Club first appeared [illegible] Yet another [illegible] where amateur drama [illegible] flourished was the [illegible] of the Victoria West Dramatic Society, headed by Alex. Semple and the Cave brothers. The [illegible] had a good [illegible] and deservedly so. Yes, Victoria was [illegible] served by amateur groups in those days, all eager to entertain [illegible] from a [illegible] [illegible] by a Mr. [illegible] of voice and [illegible] to the [illegible] of the popular [illegible] by Mrs. [illegible].

BEFORE PLAZA

It was there [illegible] that the A.O.U.W. Hall, now the Plaza, was erected. It was the "baby" of Captain J. D. Warren prominent in the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Then associated with the Victoria Theatre as stage manager and acquainted with the head of the Bosowitz Steamship Company, I was able, when asked to give him some advice regarding the main floor of the projected building he had in mind. This contemplated while upper floors were planned for lodge and meeting rooms, a semi-theatre auditorium with stage at one end, a narrow gallery midway between floor and ceiling all the way around.

When the AOUW Hall building was finished, I helped Captain Warren advertise Victoria's latest place for concerts and theatricals, but didn't make much money for him. At his suggestion I agreed to act as stage manager for an amateur group styled the Amateur Theatrical Society. It did not do very well financially, either, when it endeavoured to keep the doors of the Hall open occasionally, although it did have some regular supporters, among whom was Mrs. R. P. Rithet, who occupied a favored seat evidently, near the proscenium arch to the right of the stage.

SOME OLD NAMES

In the Theatrical Society group were D. McLeod, Harry Bechtel, R. Hutchison, B. B. Temple, Louise Copeland, Nellie and Paul Murphy. There were occasions when there were more people present in the Hall than the amateur group ever attracted. One of those occasions was when Mark Twain (Samuel Clemens) paid a memorable visit to Victoria appearing in person at AOUW Hall. That was when he was on a world tour after his publishers got into financial difficulties and he had undertaken the world trekking lecture tour in an effort to get them back on their feet again. He had a full house in Victoria, and it was a pleasure, one of the most memorable kind, to meet the creator of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, before he addressed an enthusiastic audience.

Later on in the story AOUW Hall became known as the Playhouse. Harry Lindley and his Canadian stock company were favorites there during several seasons. At the same time all of Victoria's talented menfolk ready to [illegible] their wares publicly were [illegible] to exhibition [illegible] or in [illegible]. Always ready to display their well worth-watching "turns" of acrobatic [illegible] were enthusiastic members of the Victoria Athletic Club. The club had its [illegible] on the top floor of the Brackman Ker building, Government Street, on a site now occupied by the Dragon [illegible] building. On the ground floor were the offices and warehouse of Brackman-Ker; the [illegible] floor was occupied by [illegible] who made [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of old [illegible].

TUMBLING TEAM

The young men of that [illegible] were always prominent [illegible] at May 24 [illegible] at Beacon Hill Park as well as at well attended indoor exhibitions in the Victoria Theatre and lesser halls. They were popular when they appeared in their bespangled costumes for tumbling feats, pyramid building, horizontal and parallel bar exhibits, tight rope or slack wire walking stunts. Names of those entertainers coming to mind at the moment include Joe and Otto Weiler, Fred (Cap) Gouge, Len Oliver and Dick Ball.

When those athletic minded folk decided to call it a day, Harry Bechtel, who had ambitions to be a fight promoter and educate the town Victoria idea in the manly art of self-defense, became the tenant of the top floor of the B and K building when he prevailed upon me to undertake the role of secretary for the glory of working at it.

THE GREAT DAYS

Those were great days, nevertheless. Bechtel found the parallel and horizontal bars, Indian clubs, bar bells, bag punching equipment and padded floor coverings abandoned by the athletic club most useful and managed to make the place popular when he got a lot of teen-agers and some adults interested. One instructor was Harry Dodd, who stripped neatly, was clever with his "dukes" and would have made a success in the prize ring had he decided to follow the profession. Wiser probably, he became a provincial police officer and was for years government agent at Telegraph Creek in the Cassiar district. Retiring, he returned to live in Victoria some years ago.

Bechtel staged several professional bouts in local halls between average-rated fighters from below the border. These were well attended. This created some interest for Jack Dempsey, [illegible] middleweight, called "The Nonpareil" fight fans will remember who was then head of the Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland, Ore. He paid us a special visit to get the low down regarding the possibilities of arranging some matches for his talent and other aspiring pugilists. Not looking for exhibitions, however, I remember Bob Fitzsimmons dropping in one day while he was appearing at the Victoria Theatre. [illegible] on several occasions "Mose" Peter Jackson [illegible] sojourning at the Colonist Hotel out Beacon Hill way showed up and appeared interested in the showing of pupils and methods of the amateur instructors. Bechtel's efforts did not last long, however. The average fighter wanted too much to warrant bringing a pair of them to Victoria. So a well-intentioned fight promoter took the count of 10 and dropped the idea.

Rate Yourself As a Driver

SCALOGRAM

By HERBERT J. STACK, PhD

THE following questions deal with good driving practices. It is essential that you rate yourself honestly on these questions. There is a tendency for a driver to rate himself too highly. He is inclined to remember good practices and to forget undesirable ones. To rate yourself write in the parentheses the number of times out of 10 situations that you follow the practice indicated.

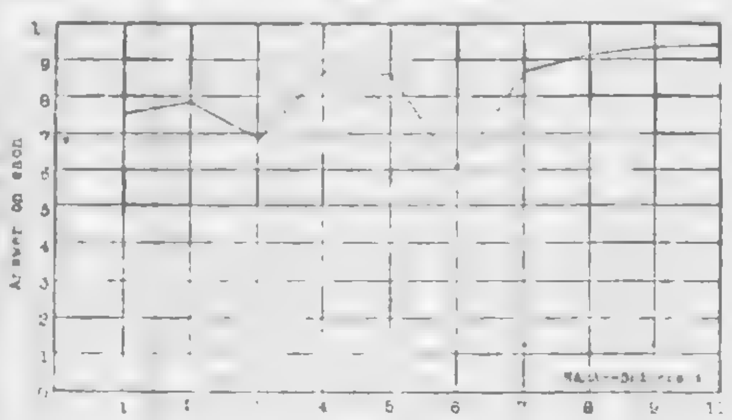

HOW MANY TIMES OUT OF 10

1. Do you reduce speed at the crest of a hill? ( )
2. When your lane of traffic is obstructed, do you stop rather than turn sharply into another lane? ( )
3. When an oncoming car refuses to dim his headlights, do you continue to leave on your low or passing beam? ( )
4. Do you slow down at marked curves? ( )
5. Do you rest or change drivers when you feel drowsy? ( )
6. Before starting a trip, do you check and adjust the doors and windows? ( )
7. Do you stop on a flashing red traffic signal? ( )
8. In night driving, when following another car, do you keep your headlights on the low beam? ( )
9. When you give a hand signal, do you act accordingly? ( )
10. Upon hearing an emergency siren and not knowing whence its direction, do you nevertheless move to get out of the way? ( )

Your Total

Average for Good Drivers 83

To get your total score add the numbers. The closer your total score to 100 the better your practices.

To get a profile or picture of your driving practices use the chart. Proceed as follows: What was your answer to the first question? Go up the vertical of question line 1 to the point where the line that represents your answer crosses it. Place a cross here. Repeat this for the rest of the questions which are vertical lines. You will have 10 crosses on the graph. Draw a line connecting the X's. The resulting graph is your profile. The dotted line is an average profile for drivers with good records. How close does your profile come to this? Where are you weak? As a double check have someone else rate you and compare results. You may be surprised by the difference between these two ratings.

Worried About Becoming Bald? Maybe That's the Cause of It

BY JERRY KLEIN

North American Newspaper Alliance

THE old notion that too much worry can make your hair fall out may not be just an old wives' tale after all.

Dr. Charles L. Schmitt, of Pittsburgh, has told the medical society of the state of Pennsylvania that such mental states as grief and shock can cause baldness. He based his statement on the case histories of [illegible] patients who lost their hair.

Many lost not only the hair on their heads, but their eyebrows and eyelashes, too, Dr. Schmitt reported. And in almost half the cases there was a history of emotional upset.

The professional opinion that the emotional troubles inside a man's head are related to the growth of hair outside his head is a startling development. In the past doctors have stressed physical troubles as the cause of baldness.

Certain infectious diseases usually are blamed for robbing a man of both his strength and his hair. In such cases, or where loss of hair is due to a poor diet, doctors say that professional treatment is called for.

Monsieur Buisson was taken ill [illegible] and no wonder. He had a [illegible] tree growing in his stomach.

The doctors who ascertained the fact by taking a series of X-rays explain that M. Buisson had swallowed a date which adhered to the inner surface of his stomach and germinated.

The medicos believe it will be possible to extract both the tree and [illegible] in a series of operations.

that this treatment can better be undertaken by qualified [illegible]. The association declared that the [illegible] qualifications possessed by most people who promise to rejuvenate your hair are a business brain and an appetite for easy money."

Allowing such things as "vitamins" to be injected into your scalp to "feed" your hair roots can be disastrous. Most so-called tonics merely make the hair easier to comb. And sulfa preparations not only have no effect on the hair but can produce rashes. And make you immune to the drug should it be used to treat some more serious ailment in the future.

Despite A.M.A. warnings, men spend millions of dollars every year to keep their hair from receding any farther. Actually, scientists say the best thing you can do for your hair is brush it vigorously and wash it often.

SOAP AND WATER

Washing is important because the soap and water remove the natural oil which collects on the surface of the scalp. Germs thrive in this oil and interfere with the growth of the hair. One recent survey among bald men disclosed that [illegible] 90 per cent of the cases were due to this excessive oiliness of the scalp.

Apparently this tendency to have an oily scalp is passed on from father to son. For investigation clearly proves that baldness is inherited.

This unhappy legacy is passed on through the female side of the family although the women themselves escape usually.

However, a New York physician recently reported that more and more females were going bald too. Of course this trend is not noticeable because no woman would walk around exposing a shiny pate. But Dr. Howard T. Berrman, a skin specialist, says that increasing numbers of women are losing their flowing locks, especially during pregnancy and menopause.

WHY WORRY?

There really isn't much need for hair these days anyway, the doctor adds. Hair was given to [illegible] to keep him warm, but [illegible] the world is warming up, the glaciers have retreated and most homes have central heating.

Looking thousands of years into the future, Dr. Beatrice sees the day when only a few "freaks" will have any hair left. By that time he says "hair may be considered ugly and degenerate and those few humans who have any may be scorned."

"Perhaps modern man's idea of beauty will change so much," the doctor says, "that he will describe his lady love as that 'beautiful bald-headed woman whose skull gleams so gloriously.'"

So what's the use in worrying about losing your hair? Especially since worry may make it disappear even faster.

VIGOROUS

The dean of French mayors, Monsieur Edmond Mathis, who is the mayor of the little provincial town of [illegible], has just celebrated his 101st birthday, but still carries out his official duties with energy and efficiency.

Furthermore Mathis does not intend to fade away in any near future and is conducting a vigorous campaign for the next municipal election.

In late 1947 25 pirates gathered money, jewels and clothing valued as high as $500,000 from passengers and crew of the 15,22-ton Dutch liner Van Heutz. The pirates controlled the vessel 15 hours and kidnapped six passengers.

COATS were never more varied, it would seem, than they are this spring. Certainly this is your year if you've been waiting one. Leading designers' New York spring collections to visiting press in New York City included the full-length coat, the three-quarter coat and a number of shorter topper lengths as well. Silhouettes vary too, but generally the lean is slimmer in loose cuts. You'll see shorter coats semi-fitted and loose. For dress wear they include the handsome silk coat [illegible] in fitted and loose style. These coats for day or afternoon become a costume when worn over simple sheath dresses. Sleeves pouffed in silk types show a touch of drama [illegible].

Angry Angel:

THE REAL STORY OF SISTER KENNY

CHAPTER I

DURING the last week of November, 1952, on the edge of a lovely Australian mountain range, an old lady lay dying.

She had told the world she was 66, but she was 72. She was regarded by the world as a medical wizard, yet she had made her way to the top, and both achievement and knowledge, with barely a sprinkling of education and background.

She had accomplished this although at 59 she had reached the end of her rope in her native Australia and had gone to America to start all over again. She had worked almost day and night for 10 years in her sixties.

Map locates Australian places which figured in the life of Sister Kenny

Her name was Elizabeth Kenny, and she affected the medical treatment of polio in most parts of the world.

I have spent several months looking into her life, both in the United States and Australia. I have talked to her best friends (and worst enemies) and the two sisters who survive of the nine Kenny children who were born to an Irish wanderer, and a tall, witty Scotch-Irish beauty in a frontier country of sheep men and stockmen, tin miners and adventurers. I have talked to Sister Kenny's daughter—many did not know it but she had an adopted daughter, a warm, motherly woman now 36 who became Mary Stewart Kenny as a little redhead of eight.

AN AMAZING WOMAN

In Australia I met Elizabeth Kenny's earliest friends, and sought out the story of her first 59 years.

It is generally accepted that Sister Kenny was an unusual woman. "Amazing" is the word you hear again and again.

I found out that her story was more amazing than anyone has supposed.

Her birthdate was not September 20, 1886, as it is listed in every standard reference work, but September 20, 1880.

She was never a formally trained nurse in any sense, as far as I have been able to discover. Except during her years in the army in the First World War, she never worked as a nurse for pay for any hospital.

How she was able to get into the Australian army nursing corps still is not clear. She may have pulled it off in part by sheer nerve.

She had practically no formal education of any kind except for a few years of backwoods schooling, and stories and lessons at her mother's knee.

THEY LAUGHED AT HER

When she first started seriously working with polio patients in the mid-30's, she knew practically nothing, medically, about polio although she had some stubborn ideas and had noted some crucially important things. But for the most part she was still ignorant then of very much.

Her best medical friends in Australia today testify to this. In fact, in those years they laughed at her.

Within five years she flabbergasted them. She listened, she learned, she imitated her critics and profited by her mistakes, and she soaked up knowledge like a sponge until in 1939 the same medical people who had called her "ignorant" and "uncouth" in 1935 were "amazed" to see her handle patients with consummate skill.

More than anyone prominent in modern medical history perhaps she pulled herself up by her bootstraps.

And the fact that she was not 66 but 72 when she died means that she was not 53, as she said, but a tired 59 when she arrived in the United States in 1940, all washed up for practical purposes so far as acceptance in Australia was concerned or a chance to influence the treatment of polio. She was not in her fifties but her sixties when she worked 18 hours a day, doing the most strenuous and fruitful work of her life at the headquarters she finally established in Minneapolis.

TOO MANY CONTROVERSIES

No one else until now, I believe, has known this much of her story. She herself told little of it.

Stripping aside all the emotion and controversy over Sister Elizabeth Kenny (the "Sister" means nurse, she was not a nun), what did she really accomplish? I have asked many authorities both here and in Australia.

When she was alive there were too many controversies around her and too many prejudices for cool answers. Now a calmer assessment is needed, and a candid look at this woman around whom, already, legends have started.

"Mark my words, we'll watch them grow now," said one doctor who was her close friend. There is no question but that she has already become the centre of a myth, in many minds a sort of Joan of Arc of polio. The valiant nurse who, single-handed brought relief to suffering children while all medicine snickered.

This is exaggeration — yet there is a solid body of fact that is just as thrilling.

And there is general medical agreement: "She accomplished much. She did relieve suffering."

IN A SMALL CITY

Much of this may have been on the mind of Elizabeth Kenny during the 11 days that she lay dying in the city of Toowoomba in the large, sub-tropical state of Queensland in faroff Australia.

Toowoomba is a small city 85 miles inland. To the west there is green, rolling farm country, like southern Minnesota or Wisconsin, to the east a range of highlands and low mountains, then Brisbane on the coast. The mountains are Australia's great dividing range that separates the coast from the interior—they are called just "the Range."

You climb to Toowoomba. You go in low gear up a road that cuts through the Range, past farms clinging to hillsides, trees that flower, breathtaking views and rusty stalls at the roadside for loading sheep. Here, Australia is neither a Minnesota or Wisconsin but a Switzerland, rugged and steep.

Sister Kenny lived out her life in a fine brick house on the rim of Toowoomba overlooking these peaks. She wrote, she went visiting, she read, she answered critics and heaped coals on enemies, and her mind never rested.

A SHAKING PALSY

She had Parkinson's disease, the shaking palsy that makes the hands tremble, but it was better.

She was planning a new trip to America, her last "goodbye trip" was almost six months past. And on Wednesday, November 19, as she did almost every day, she "went out."

On that day she went with a niece and her husband to see another piece of Range property, one with an even more inspiring view. She was renting; she wanted to build her own home.

She said she would take the piece of land. That afternoon she had a stroke.

At first she did not even want the doctor. "At first it didn't seem at all serious," said her companion, Mrs. Mollie Shortt.

Elizabeth Kenny quickly got worse. Once she realized she was paralyzed, she knew she was done. "I know how this is it," she told her doctor.

"It was a stroke, cerebral thrombosis—degeneration of the

THE STORY OF SISTER KENNY

ANGRY ANGEL, the story of the real Sister Kenny, is the result of many months of painstaking research by the author, Victor Cohn, a staff writer for the Minneapolis Tribune. Mr. Cohn, who knew Sister Kenny intimately during the years she lived and worked in Minneapolis, interviewed doctors, patients and friends here and went to Australia, where Sister Kenny was born, and talked to her relatives, her friends and her enemies.

Never before has this fascinating story been told in such intimate detail. Here are revealed unknown facts about her early life in Australia, about her unfulfilled romance, about her early battles with doctors both here and abroad, about her courageous fight against overwhelming odds.

You'll want to read every word of this interesting and inspiring story of the amazing woman who upset medical theory and practice to bring relief to thousands of polio sufferers.

blood vessels of the brain," said the doctor. Her Parkinsonism had been well under control, but both the stroke and the Parkinson's were manifestations of the same blood vessel degeneration."

Mary Stewart Kenny McCracken, her adopted daughter, came to the bedside. She and her husband brought a month-old baby girl for Sister Kenny to see for the first time, their own newly adopted girl, their second.

With Mary and the new baby there, Sister Kenny started to cry. Mary recalled: "I said to her 'Is it because you can't speak?' She only nodded."

Sister Kenny made the last revision of her will on Saturday, November 22.

Here is Sister Kenny's motherly and warm side, shown as she hugs a five-year-old Oklahoma City patient at the Elizabeth Kenny Institute in Minneapolis. With children, she could be a "different woman," some friends said.

Other relatives came. She often cried. On the following Monday, roughly, she completely lost her power of speech.

She remained conscious for almost four days although she could not speak.

A cable arrived from her close friend Rosalind Russell, the actress: "We know our Waltzing Matilda will be up."

A LAST DRAMA

But she was put on oxygen and she developed pneumonia, and on Friday morning, November 28, she went into a coma.

There was a last drama. A father of a polio victim in Newark had cabled Sister Kenny's doctor several days before about a new drug, trypsin, that was being used experimentally to dissolve blood clots. Dr. Ogden phoned the experimenter, Dr. Irving Innerfield, at Jewish Memorial Hospital, New York.

A supply of crystalline trypsin was put on a British Commonwealth Pacific airliner at New York. The plane fought bad headwinds but made maximum speed and landed at Brisbane in 19 hours and two minutes, having been diverted from its usual landing place, Sydney.

It put down at 8.21 p.m. on Saturday at Brisbane. A car with police escort sped to Toowoomba to the hushed red brick house on the beautiful rim of the Range, and by 10 p.m. the first dose was administered to the old polio fighter.

At 1.32 p.m. on Sunday, November 30, she died.

"I think it was a kind of sad ending," said a niece. "She had a fear to die," said Stewart McCracken, Mary's husband. "She knew her job wasn't finished. She was upset because she had not finished her newest book."

FLAG DRAPED COFFIN

Elizabeth Kenny was buried near the little home of a village called Nobby, not far from Toowoomba, the village that she really came from when she set forth in 1915 to England and her first war and first sight of the world.

Her coffin was draped with a Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes, and the wheat farmers halted at their work as the procession passed, and they stood at the fences, slouch hats off and heads bowed.

In newspapers in almost every country, Elizabeth Kenny's death was first page.

What sort of woman was this whose death the whole world watched?

What sort of woman who was called both a fraud and a medical genius, both a "cheap quack" and an unhappy martyr, both a raging old tiger and a merciful angel?

CHAPTER 2

"SISTER Kenny?" said a friend of hers. "Good heavens. She could be a saint one minute while treating a child, and two minutes later turn to a doctor and blister him."

She could be stormy, she could be rude, she could be surly - and her own worst enemy.

According to those who knew her best, Elizabeth Kenny was a strange and bold woman with a fierce warmth for people and causes she loved. She was a grim, lonely woman, difficult to talk to much of the time, firm as a rock in some ways, flighty and unpredictable in others.

She was often at odds with even her co-workers, and lacked close friends. Yet her few close friends were warm friends who saw an entirely different Sister Kenny.

And she was uniquely revered by millions, and had so much appeal or instilled so much admiration that American women, polled by Dr. Gallup in 1952 named her closer than any other woman to their ideal, ahead of Eleanor Roosevelt and Princess, now Queen, Elizabeth.

WOUNDED IN LEGS

She made terrible enemies and devoted followers everyplace. Something, or many things, turned her constantly inward.

She was wounded in the legs by shrapnel as an Aussie nurse in the First World War and all her life had to wear bandages sometimes and suffer recurring sores when a piece of metal worked its way out. Perhaps this had something to do with [illegible].

Perhaps it was [illegible] she never married or gave more [illegible] looking. To [illegible] wish to know her.

Perhaps it was frequent disappointment and defeat, at least by her own goals. Perhaps it was insecurity—the insecurity of lack of formal academic grounding either in basic nursing or medicine. Perhaps it was several things that happened to her as a young woman.

At any rate, Elizabeth Kenny could bite off a head. Time magazine once referred to her as "soft-spoken," but this is the only instance of this on record. (It happened in 1941; she had been in the United States only a year.)

One time she was taken to see a boy whom his doctor had said would be a bed patient the rest of his life. Present were the doctor, a prominent orthopedic surgeon, and the boy's family. She took one look at the youth, then said:

"What plumber took care of him?"

The boy, as it happened, was put under Kenny institute supervision and did well.

Her aggressive manner and beating earned her nicknames like "the Duchess" and "the Queen" even from friends who loved her. When slighted or attacked she was quick to hit back by telegram, press statement, long-distance telephone and all other means of modern communication.

Unfortunately, she stepped often on sensitive and important toes, which explains a great deal about the continued controversy over her.

"She could be devastatingly neat and tactless," said a close friend. "She was noted for her [illegible] you know," said a Kenny therapist who went at [illegible].

[illegible] in 1941 or 1942 wrote [illegible] that pleased her and graciously asked her to read a proof of his new book and let him know if there was anything in it she would like him to change.

"He showed real bigness," said her close friend. "She told him, 'If you changed what I wanted, you'd have only two pages, the first flyleaf and the back one'."

Merely to snicker at these incidents, or simply condemn her, would show little understanding of Elizabeth Kenny. For one thing there was far too much tragedy in them; only bitter wounds produce such deep scars. For another thing, however, there was often a good bit of humor in her bite, she could be unbearably pompous on one occasion, and herself puncture pomposity the next.

"She would be found with someone," said Dudley Nichols, the brilliant and sensitive director and writer who wrote "The Informer," and produced and directed the movie "Sister Kenny." "Then she'd turn and wink and later roar with laughter."

"She was the Queen Mary in full steam when she came charging into a room," said a friend.

"She had the power of a [illegible] the nickname which stuck to her over the years," said a writer in Sydney. An Australian doctor said: "I used to call her 'my old dreadnought.' She always loved a fight. She would [illegible] in with all guns firing."

OVERPOWERING, POSITIVE

She was five feet eight inches tall and weighed some 170 pounds—which once caused a problem when she was informed at the headquarters of Imperial Airways in England that the total allowance for each passenger to Australia would be 220 pounds, counting luggage.

She was, in her prime, strapping, erect, overpowering and positive. She had large, open brown eyes, and a direct gaze that could, when she wanted, turn to steel. She had, in her American years, grey hair later white cut short and wavy. She had a strong jaw. It jutted.

She could be as austere as an iceberg. "She seemed incapable of relaxing," said an Australian who expressed a common view. "Her expression while talking to strangers was defensive and unsympathetic, her voice was a deep monotone."

But perhaps none of these people ever got inside her. For Elizabeth Kenny could be very human and her face very soft. At the same time that she was hard and imposing to many, Sister Kenny was buxom and motherly to others, a perfect symbol for the good protector of children. "She was a very lonely woman," [illegible] Holly [illegible]. But she was [illegible] had deep resources."

I [illegible] Sister Kenny [illegible] I believe there [illegible].

A WORLD OF HER OWN

I [illegible] never saw Sister Kenny [illegible] but I saw her [illegible] six or so years. It was always slowly then and indeed in a stiff stately way. Part of this was physical. She wasn't well. She seemed to have more and more difficulty moving and carrying her own weight.

She was a big woman and imposing, yes. But for the most part she did not seem pompous to me so much as detached. She was, in large part, in a little world of her own. And, very important, I think, she never quite trusted the great outside world, or felt fully confident.

Thrust in public however, she became a figure. An actress would have said she had stage presence. Sister Kenny herself was always aware of this. She dominated a room or a stage or an auditorium or a medical ward.

And she did have showmanship. On more than one occasion she arrived at a meeting, a dinner or a luncheon a little late, after everyone else was seated. Everyone usually stood for her as she sailed slowly to her place. It made a great show.

"I visited Washington last week and had a fine reception," the flip and merry Sister Kenny that few people knew once wrote a friend. "I did not know for a time whether I was Al Capone or the Queen of England."

HAD A FUNNYBONE

She wrote another time: "Enclosed please find a copy of a letter (a glowing testimonial by several doctors) written to Sir Owen Gibson, Australian ambassador, Washington, D.C. We cannot say that all medical men are boneheads."

Once at a public affair in New York, the police had to be called to protect her. Fans crowded to touch her. A friend said: "They were slashing buttons from her frock with scissors and razor blades. They tore at the scarf around her neck and tried hard to get her famous Australian 'digger' hat."

When the police finally rescued her, she grinned and said: "Thank goodness they left me with my underwear."

For Elizabeth Kenny had a funnybone. You couldn't [illegible] her. She had a remark for every occasion, and among good friends she could be very good company.

"Did you ever hear her laugh, really laugh?" asked Mrs. Mary Stewart Kenny McCracken, her adopted daughter. "It was a hearty full-throated laugh. She would throw her head back and just laugh and laugh."

She could laugh among friends and could listen. She could quote Shakespeare and the Bible. She liked good stories and could tell them.

It is almost as though there were three Sister Kennys: the austere commanding one, the deft therapist in the polio ward and finally the good friend and companion.

Bail System Advantage—If You Have the Cash

BY MAURY GWYNNE

The habitual drunkard can buy a clean police record for $10.

If an arrested drunk can raise $10 bail before police court the morning after his arrest he can walk out of the police station a free man with no record of his offense.

If he can't produce the bail he goes before the magistrate, is fined $10 or more and it goes on the record for all time that he was arrested for being "unlawfully intoxicated in a public place."

The reason for this is the condition attached to the privilege of the bail. Were the man who put up the bail to appear in court his bail is estreated. It costs him as much as the convicted man but there is no court record of him ever having been convicted of the offense.

ADVISED TO APPEAR

Police officers know this and advise a drunk when he tenders to produce bail that he should appear in court but if he does not he loses the bail and keeps his reputation.

The policemen aren't doing it to cheat the courts but out of kindness to a man who may have had "one too many" at a party.

For the man who doesn't have the bail and can't raise it before court it will probably mean three days or more in jail.

NO OPTION THIRD TIME

For the second offender the fine is $25 or five days and for the third offender 30 days in jail with no optional fine.

But as long as a man can raise that $10 bail he doesn't need to appear in court or ever have his record blemished.

This is a common occurrence particularly on Monday mornings. The list of people who have had bail estreated can be quite long and occasionally contains some well known names.

By some it is considered an unfair way of administering justice. Why should the man with no money have to go to jail for an offense no worse than the man with money who is free and often brags about his "good reputation" they say.

ALCOHOLISM FACTOR

It is also being blamed for the high incidence of alcoholism which recently rated the worst [illegible] in Canada for this [illegible].

It's encouraging people to [illegible] when they know they can get away without a police record simply by failing to appear in court, probationists and [illegible] say.

Suggestions have been made that the Criminal Code be amended making it mandatory for an arrested drunk to appear and take his medicine.

Others say it is a good way of dealing with the situation.

"Why clutter up the courts with drunk cases when the fine can be levied much quicker this way?"

JUSTICE PLUS MERCY

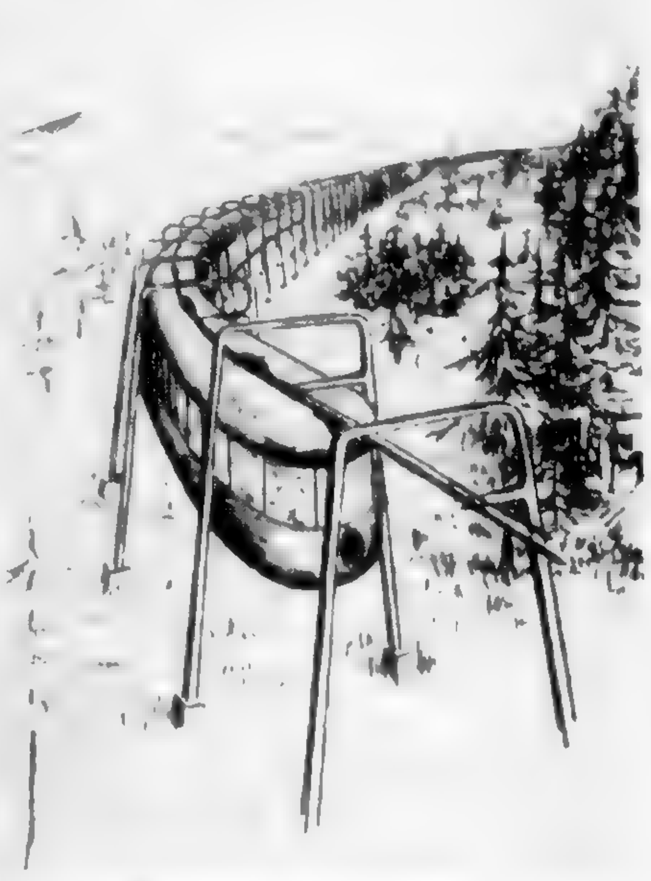

But the police departments and the courts temper their justice with mercy now and then too making it a little easier on the regular offender.

If a man who makes regular appearances behaves himself for a month or two then falls by the wayside the police officer who makes out the charge will "forget" the accused has a previous record of drunkenness.

The magistrate who rarely forgets a face may also "not recognize" the man and treat him as a first offender keeping the punishment to $10 or three days.

But it doesn't change the system. You can still keep your name clear by producing $10 before court sits.

Interest Grows In Monorail

Sketch of proposed monorail

The provincial trade and industry department is interested in current proposals to link Saanich and [illegible] with the Gulf Islands by means of a monorail system.

Possibilities of such a scheme were laid before Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Chetwynd Friday by Sidney Angell, Vancouver representative of Monorail, of San Francisco.

Following the interview, Mr. Chetwynd said he was interested in the plan.

With current rapid developments in the transportation field the minister said establishment of an inter-island monorail system may well be feasible.

Mr. Chetwynd said discussions were on a general level and before monorail extension of the PGE could be seriously considered a definite and detailed plan for a practical system would have to be presented.

Mr. Angell said earlier in the week he hoped to interest the government in use of monorail to complete the PGE.

FIRM FORMED

A private firm, known as Gulf Islands Development Company, has been formed by Mr. Angell and W. D. Gillespie, a Vancouver barrister, to undertake a [illegible] survey.

Immediate financial requirements for a survey are about $7,000, according to Mr. Angell, and it could be launched if 50 investors put up $750 each. He hoped this would come from residents of areas to benefit by the system.

A CPR spokesman stated that the company has heard of the plan but will be unable to consider it until more information is available.

Bids To Be Called Within Week For Third Stage of Arsenal Job

Tenders are expected to be called within a week for the first phase of a third stage of construction of Rocky Point [illegible] arsenal.

Cost is estimated at $300,000 for the initial [illegible] of the work which will involve erecting a 300,000-gallon capacity reinforced concrete water reservoir on top of Mary Hill, installation of one mile of cast iron water pipe from the reservoir to the project and including two 1,200-feet long underwater crossings at Pedder Inlet and some electrical and asphalt road surfacing work.

SEVERAL CALLS

The call for tenders is one of several involving national defense work. Architects Wade and Stockdill expect to complete working drawings by the end of this month on the naval supply building at Esquimalt. Tenders may be invited during March for work estimated at more than $450,000.

At Comox a contract for an all metal explosive storage building for the RCAF station there has been let to Seymour Construction Company, Ltd., Vancouver.

The federal government also has announced that tenders will close March 3 for construction of a wharf at the boom defense depot on the western side of the harbor.

Corps Set To Test Defenses

Effectiveness of the ground observer corps in Greater Victoria will be tested next Sunday in a day-long scheme of plotting enemy aircraft.

The scheme will involve 9 corps stations on Vancouver Island from Port Alberni to the Islands East coast and south to Victoria area.

House Ban Stands At Four Cameras

The game of "Now you see it and now you don't" played during the past week by speaker of the legislature Tom Irwin and B.C. newspaper photographers ended in a draw yesterday.

Mr. Irwin declared that his final ruling issued Friday still stands—only four press photographers will be allowed to cover opening ceremonies on the floor of the house.

The argument started when the speaker ruled that no newspaper photographer would be allowed to cover the opening of the legislature. Provision was made, however, for a CBC television cameraman and a government photographer to be on the floor of the house.

The ban was hotly protested by B.C. newspapers. Mr. Irwin relented and said two press photographers would be allowed to take pictures. This also failed to satisfy Mainland papers and a Vancouver newspaper editorial called the speaker's decision "creeping censorship."

Before the editorial appeared, however, Mr. Irwin had given in a little more with a ruling that four news photographers would be permitted in the house.

Obviously annoyed the speaker said the paper wasn't "polite enough to check with me before running the editorial."

Mr. Irwin was even more annoyed over the impression created by a statement he gave to a Vancouver morning newspaper which was printed Friday.

Part of the speaker's statement [illegible]

[illegible]

Newspaper took this to mean that there would be no bars whatever on the number of press photographers allowed in the house.

Mr. Irwin squelched this interpretation yesterday by declaring that his reference to the agreement with the press gallery meant there would only be four cameramen permitted.

A spokesman for the press gallery stated, however, that there had been no full-fledged agreement. He explained that the speaker had asked if it would be possible to get along with four cameramen and a gallery representative had regarded this as a definite ruling.

Mr. Irwin has declared that his original ruling limiting camera coverage was based on a desire to maintain the dignity and decorum of parliamentary procedure.

Bail System Advantage—If You Have the Cash

BY MAURY GWYNNE

The habitual drunkard can buy a clean police record for $10.

If an arrested drunk can raise $10 bail before police court the morning after his arrest he can walk out of the police station a free man with no record of his offense.

If he can't produce the bail, he goes before the magistrate, is fined $10 or more and it goes on the record for all time that he was arrested for being "unlawfully intoxicated in a public place."

The reason for this is the condition attached to the privilege of the bail. When the man who put up the bail fails to appear in court, his bail is estreated. It cost him as much as the convicted man, but there is no court record of him ever having been convicted of the offense.

ADVISED TO APPEAR

Police officers know this and advise a drunk when he makes [illegible] that he should appear in court, but if he does not, he loses the bail and keeps his reputation.

The policemen aren't doing it to cheat the courts but out of kindness to a man who may have had one too many at a party.

For the man who doesn't have the bail and can't raise it before court, it will probably mean three days or more in [illegible].

NO OPTION THIRD TIME

For the second offender the fine is $25 or five days, and for the third offender 20 days in jail with no optional fine.

But as long as a man can raise that $10 bail, he doesn't need to appear in court or ever have his record blemished.

This is a common occurrence particularly on Monday mornings. The list of people who have their bail estreated can be quite large and occasionally contains some well-known names.

By some it is considered an unfair way of administering justice. Why should the man with no money have to go to jail for an offense no worse than the man with money who [illegible] is free and often brags about his "good reputation," they ask.

ALCOHOLISM FACTOR

It is also being blamed for [illegible] of alcoholism [illegible] recently [illegible] the worst [illegible] in Canada for this [illegible].

It is encouraging people to [illegible] they know they can [illegible] without a police record simply by failing to appear [illegible] prohibitionists and [illegible].

[illegible] have been made that the criminal code be amended [illegible] mandatory for an arrested drunk to appear and [illegible].

JUSTICE PLUS MERCY

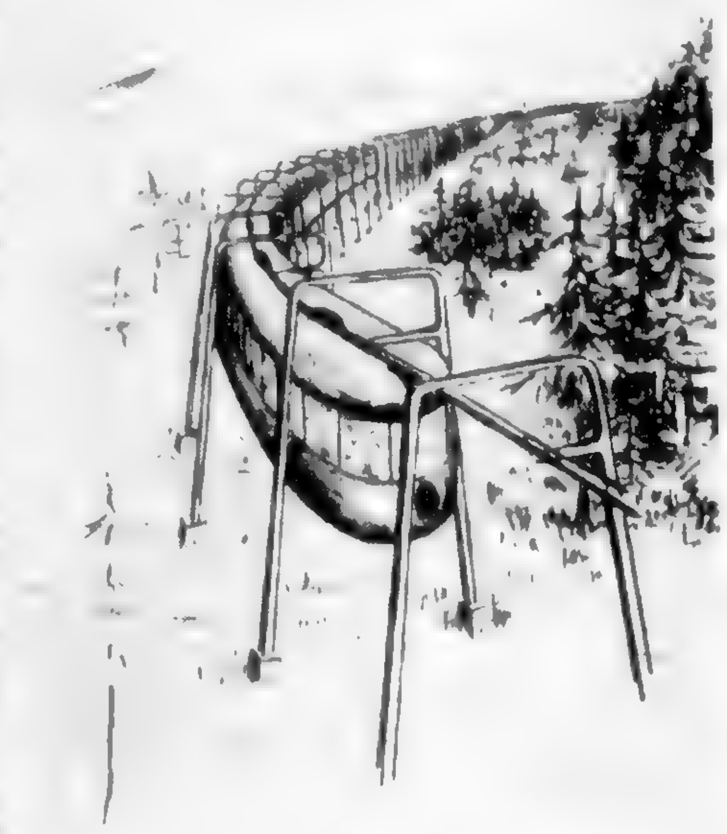

But the police departments and the courts temper their justice with mercy now and then too making it a little easier on the regular offender.

If a man who makes regular appearances behaves himself for a month or two, then falls by the wayside, the police officer who makes out the charge will "forget" the accused has a previous record of drunkenness.

The magistrate, who rarely forgets a face, may also "not recognize" the man and treat him as a first offender, keeping the punishment to $10 or three days.

But it doesn't change the system. You can still keep your name clear by producing $10 before court sits.

Interest Grows In Monorail

Sketch of proposed monorail.

The provincial trade and industry department is interested in current proposals to link Nanaimo and Duncan with the Gulf Islands by means of a monorail system.

Possibilities of such a scheme were laid before Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Chetwynd Friday by Sidney Angell, Vancouver representative of Monorail, of San Francisco.

Following the interview, Mr. Chetwynd said he was interested in the plan.

With current rapid developments in the transportation field the minister said establishment of an inter-island monorail system may well be feasible.

Mr. Chetwynd said discussions were on a general level and before monorail extension of the PGE could be seriously considered a definite and detailed plan for a practical system would have to be presented.

Mr. Angell said earlier in the week he hoped to interest the government in use of monorail to complete the PGE.

FIRM FORMED

A private firm, known as Gulf Islands Development Company, has been formed by Mr. Angell and W. D. Gillespie, a Vancouver barrister, to undertake a local survey.

Immediate financial requirements for a survey are about $75,000, according to Mr. Angell, and it could be launched if 50 investors put up $750 each. He hoped this would come from residents of areas to benefit by the system.

A CPR spokesman stated that the company has heard of the plan but will be unable to consider it until more information is available.

Students Rehearse Gay Gypsy-Operetta

Gaily-costumed Victoria High School students are pictured in a scene from "Colonia," an operetta based on the melodies of Franz Liszt which will be presented in the high school auditorium this Friday and Saturday evenings. [illegible] is Mr. Thomas Mayne with Miss Norma Douglas directing, the singing; Mrs. Sheila Besley the dance [illegible] and Mr. Warren Bertsch the school orchestra. Shown above are Keith Murray, left, and Hewlett Gwynne with gypsy dancers Dorcas Cadwell, Barbara Hawkes, Elizabeth Cook, Sally McGill, Virginia Jay, and Jean Seto left to right. Last year's operetta was a sell-out, and tickets for this year's production are reported going rapidly.

Victorians Visit Mexico While on Holiday South

BY KAY McGREGOR

PALM SPRINGS. [illegible] ... except maybe canned beer.

So the next morning we set out for a day in Mexicali, 120 miles from here. A pair of [illegible] tourists at heart, we [illegible] Mexicali instead of Tia Juana because we'd visited the latter on other trips to California and because we couldn't be this close to another country without making at least one visit to a border town.

TO SALTON SEA

The drive took us through the date palm gardens and grapefruit groves of Indio and then to the Salton Sea. Fifty years ago this inland sea, 30 miles long and more than 200 feet below sea level, didn't exist. Then the Southern Pacific built levees to protect its right of way from the sometimes raging Colorado River and later the overflow from irrigation canals completed its formation. Now its waters are a favorite spot for speed boat races and water sports.

Much of the desert at Palm Springs is covered with mesquite, stunted palos verde trees and cactus. Quite different is the desert by the Salton Sea. It looks like pictures of the Sahara with the white dunes rising as high as a two-story building. This is the country the movie makers turn to when they're shooting pictures with a North African locale.

Fifty miles or so of desert with scarcely a gas station brought us to the Imperial Valley made into one of California's choicest agricultural spots by irrigation. Lettuce and carrots looked ready for harvesting and the fields were green with a lush crop of sugar beets too.

We were humming that song "Mexicali Rose" and checking the locale of the nearby storied Alamo on our road maps as we passed through El Centro, last United States city of any size and a few minutes later Mexican immigration men waved us through the stone archway boundary.

DIRTY STREETS

"Let's drive right through the city and really look it over before we park" were our thoughts as we shied away from the first few blocks as tourist [illegible] ... scorned at first.

Here we found a store of two with an interpreter so we could [illegible] ... sidewalks.

A few routine questions from the American border guards and we were back on the highway to El Centro. By the time we'd finished dinner there it was eight and very dark.

STOPPED BY POLICE

[illegible]

Our short episode was by no means unpleasant but it reminded us of stories of other searches by night in very different countries when the results are more drastic and less happy.

There was a reason for the check too. Part of the crowd we had seen milling through the Mexican streets was made up of agricultural workers who had beaten their way from the hinterland attracted by the lush harvest in the Imperial Valley and the pay of 10 times as much as they could earn at home. As many as 5,000 a day were looking for jobs inside California but only 500 a day were being hired. Many more were rushing border guards or sneaking across by night.

Etiquette

Q. Is it necessary always to give the reason for declining an invitation?

A. When writing a formal refusal to a third-person formal invitation no explanation is needed. But when you decline an informal invitation received from a good friend it is always better to explain.

Q. How does a divorced woman who has returned to live with her parents notify her friends and acquaintances of her change in address?

A. She can have ordinary visiting cards printed with her name alone and her parents' address, and mail these out.

Q. When eating a soft fried egg is it all right to put a small piece of bread on the end of the fork and use this to dip up the yolk?

A. This is quite all right.

PICADA

There is a Basque dish and wonderful for an inexpensive meal since you can use plain hamburger to make it. First brown a clove of garlic in 2 tablespoons of oil. Remove it and add to the oil a pound of ground beef. Mashing it with a fork, saute till brown in a sort of loose hash. While it's cooking, add ⅛ teaspoon each of ground nutmeg and powdered clove and a speck of cayenne and mix in thoroughly. Serve with fluffy rice, grilled tomato halves and a green salad.

FASHIONS TO BE EXHIBITED

Leading mannequins wearing tweeds, knitwear and Scottish tartans and accessories will take part in an important fashion show which will be a feature of the Scottish Industries Exhibition to be held at the Kelvin Hall, Glasgow, from September 2-18 this year. Lord Bilsland, president of the Scottish Council (Development and Industry), which is responsible for organizing the exhibition said recently that Scotland had made good progress in the development of new industries in the past four years.

To Be Married in Cathedral

Mr. and Mrs. G. May, 6?7 Pine Street, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Gladys Eleanor, to Malvyn Dawes, youngest son of Mrs. [illegible] M. Dawes, 846 Cook Street, and the late Mr. [illegible] Dawes. The wedding will take place March 2? at 7.30 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral. Miss May has chosen Miss Juanita Campbell as maid of honor, Mrs. K. Sheddon as bridesmatron, and her sister, Miss Viola May, as junior bridesmaid. Best man will be Mr. Roy Allison and ushers will be Mr. Ken Sheddon and Mr. Dennis Grove. —(Jus-Rite photo.)

Cuddly Koalas Appeal to Tots

Koala bears, those cuddlesome little creatures from Australia, are [illegible] at a Fort Street store that specializes in dolls and teddy bears.

Not real ones, of course, but the stuffed variety are just as bright-eyed and cute and are bound to appeal to any toddler. These are big ones, about 15 inches high and they look nearly as wide as they are tall.

Since Koala bears can't be killed, the toys are covered with [illegible] kangaroo skin. They're priced at $6.45.

Eyes for Sale

The same store also carries panda bears' eyes to [illegible] the ones a two-year-old pulls off his panda a week after he gets it. Forty cents buys the movable kind while a [illegible] type is 25 cents.

A small girl with a birthday coming up would love a big baby doll whose skin [illegible] feels like skin. This baby has [illegible] she cries when you squeeze her, sobs when you spank her and coos when you hug her. Sleeping eyes too and dressed in a diaper and shirt. She costs $3.55.

As the toys in the store are on sale and you'll find many [illegible] ...

There are [illegible] including sets of the daintiest lingerie, panties, bra and petticoat, for 65 cents. They're made of taffeta in pink, blue or yellow and are all trimmed with lace and bits of ribbon.

Quilted taffeta was used to make crib or doll buggy covers [illegible] and trimmed with plain taffeta. These are [illegible]

Painting Sets Simplified

The popular paint-by-numbers sets have been simplified for [illegible] and subjects favored by small fry include Rodeo, American Indians, Man's Best Friend, Stablemates, Circus Fun, Ballet Dancers, and others.

For $1.50 you get two 8" by 10" canvases, all numbered, 12 ready-mixed colors in a metal tray, and a paint brush.

Coal Mining Gets Choice Of Machines

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The coal industry, long hoping for a continuous mining machine that will speed up production and at the same time cut operating expenses, may soon have its pick of several robot diggers.

At least two continuous mining machines are already in commercial production. Several more are expected to hit the market shortly—probably this year.

Most of the mechanical diggers operate on a cutting principle, using chain-like saws to loosen the coal and conveyor belts to get it out of the seam and into cars. Of course, each has its own design and some are still being kept secret.

Already on the job deep underground are diggers made by Jeffrey Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, and Joy Manufacturing Company of Pittsburgh. Le Roi Company of Milwaukee, Wis., expects to market its machine this year.

Jim Nesbitt on Politics

BY JAMES K. NESBITT

Mr. Nesbitt, well-known writer and broadcaster on political and historical events, is a frequent contributor to The Daily Colonist.

When Mr. Speaker Thomas Irwin [illegible] getting [illegible]

MUST HAVE DIGNITY

He's obsessed with the idea that dignity and decorum must be preserved in the legislature. It pains him, on opening day, to see flash bulbs going off all over the place. It makes him think the legislature's being turned into some kind of spectacle a la Hollywood.

That's why he thought it might be a good idea if only two photographers were in the chamber next Tuesday. His only idea was to preserve the dignity and decorum that he's convinced is so highly important.

Some people say that Mr. Speaker seeks to control the press, and attempts to impose a sort of censorship. That, in my opinion is stuff and nonsense. Mr. Irwin, like all politicians, gets sore with the newspapers now and then but he certainly doesn't believe in throttling the press, much as he might like to, momentarily, sometimes.

Anyway, due to a great hue and cry, Mr. Speaker has relented somewhat and he's going to let photographers into the chamber but he's hoping to goodness those flash bulbs won't be flashing in every nook and cranny.

They honestly distract him, those flash bulbs; he likes his picture in the papers, as any politician does, but he can't abide the bright flashes, and he's sure they take away from the dignity of the house.

Dignity, dignity, dignity—there must be dignity in the legislature, says Mr. Speaker.

HANDSOME MACE

That's why he ordered a handsome new mace. The old one, says Mr. Speaker, is an undignified abomination. Why, says Mr. Speaker, it's only brass—a bauble made in Chicago for a side show! That's not good enough for the B.C. Legislature—a tinny old mace made in, of all places, Chicago, the empire of Col. McCormick and his anti-British ravings. A mace from Chicago indeed!

Why Mr. Speaker won't announce what the new mace cost is a bit of a mystery. Perhaps Mr. Speaker thinks it's not dignified to talk money in the same breath with the mace. But, anyway, it's public money that bought the new mace, and so, a year or so from now, the exact price is bound to come out in public accounts.

Well, perhaps Mr. Speaker is right. Perhaps B.C. can afford a new mace. The old one cost but $150 in Chicago and that was nearly 60 years ago.

How it was that a mace made for a Chicago sideshow got into the B.C. Legislature is a mystery. How on earth did the speaker of that day learn there was a mace for sale cheap in Chicago? We'll probably never know the answer to that one.

NO WOMEN AT DINNER

For the first time in some years there'll be no woman present at the first state dinner at Government House Tuesday evening. Until women got into the legislature, state dinners were strictly stag affairs.

And the first state dinner remained a stag affair until Mrs. Nancy Hodges was appointed speaker in 1950. Before that the ladies, as private MLA's, went to the second state dinner.

Mrs. Hodges was alone in her glory, among all the gentlemen, at the first state dinner for three years. Then she was defeated in 1952—and last session another woman took her place, alone among the men—Mrs. Tilly Rolston, as minister of education. Mrs. Hodges last year went to the second state dinner, because she was a private MLA.

Mrs. Hodges, as Madame Senator, was invited to the first state dinner this year but had to send her regrets, as she's in Ottawa busy with her senatorial duties.

At the second state dinner next week there'll be but one woman present, Mrs. Lydia Arsens, the only woman in the legislature.

Apparently the Social Credit caucus has politely but firmly slapped down Hugh Shantz, MLA for North Okanagan and his idea that it would be good to have a plebiscite about hospital insurance.

Mr. Shantz is a bit vague as to why he thought such a plebiscite should be held. Oh, he said some of his constituents aren't fussy about some of the details, though they all approve of hospital insurance in principle.

ALWAYS GROUSING

Mr. Shantz should know by this time, however, that nobody likes all the details of a law. Why, people just hate income tax laws, and there's always grousing about traffic laws.

Laws, of course, are made for the greatest good for the greatest number, and that's what hospital insurance is for, and it's working out very well. Just ask anyone faced with a hospital bill.

Ah, the way of politics! There's Byron Johnson, pitched out into the political cold because he brought in hospital insurance, and stuck with it, tenaciously, honestly, because he knew it had to be.

And here's Social Credit, which campaigned on a platform of voluntary hospital insurance, insisting that compulsory hospital insurance is a wonderful thing, which it is.

Well, here's something to be thankful for, that the Social Crediters have been honest enough to do a complete about face on hospital insurance, have eaten their words about making hospital insurance voluntary.

But as they boast of hospital insurance it would be nice if now and then, they gave a pat on the back to Byron Johnson and George Pearson, the minister of health and welfare then and his successor, Douglas Turnbull, for keeping it going through its stormiest days.

Salvation Army Hits Sunday TV

LONDON (Reuters) — Gen Albert Orsborn, head of the Salvation Army, has asked Salvationists to cover up their television sets on Sundays. Writing in the Army's newspaper, War Cry, General Orsborn said Salvationists "should definitely put a cover over their sets on Sundays, even during children's hour. It is impossible to pick and choose the helpful from the harmful."

VIENNA (Reuters)—Hungarian women have been taking spokes from bicycle wheels and sharpening them to substitute for scarce knitting needles, the Communist newspaper Esti Budapest, just received in Austria, complains. The newspaper said the practice was criticized at a recent public meeting as being costly and "a great danger to bicycle owners."

Allegations by Coldwell Answered

Bonner Denies UN Publication Withdrawn from B.C. Schools

Recent allegations of CCF leader M. J. Coldwell in the House of Commons, linking withdrawal of a United Nations Association publication from B.C. schools with the recent book-burning issue here, were described yesterday by Education Minister Robert Bonner as "ridiculously distorted."

Mr. Coldwell's statement is not correct either in fact or inference, declared the education minister.

GRANT DISCONTINUED

Mr. Bonner denied that any publication had been withdrawn. He said the provincial government at the last session had voted against continuing an annual $1,000 grant to the [illegible] as a move to cut education department costs. For this grant the UN Association had sent the department a monthly news summary of UN activities [illegible] to schools. When the grant stopped so did the publication, said the minister. It was not a case of deliberately dropping it.

Mr. Bonner denied Mr. Coldwell's statement that the publication has been circulated in all the provinces. On the front page of a recent issue, he said, were listed provinces which did receive it: Saskatchewan, Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

School Budget Raised By Operational Costs

Ten per cent increase in the school board's 1954 budget "reflects higher operational costs due to an expanding school population and higher salaries," according to Warren Jeune, board chairman.

Increased costs are inevitable, he said, while the school population is growing at the rate of about 1,000 a year.

At the present time there are 968 more pupils than one year ago, and it is anticipated that provision must be made for at least 17 additional classrooms in September in spite of the number of students who will be graduating, he said.

Car Rams Signal

A traffic signal stopped a car at 2:15 a.m. yesterday.

Police reported that a car driven west on Belleville Street by Paul D. Vickers, HMCS Sioux, turned right onto Government Street, mounted the curb at the northeast corner and struck a traffic signal.

The car, owned by Island U-Drive, was found parked on the Empress Hotel driveway. The driver had left in a taxi and was later contacted at 101 Dallas Road, police said.

Passengers [illegible], same address, and Robert Kipp, HMCS Naden, and the driver all escaped injury.

The bidding

South	West	North	East
2♡	Dbl	2♠	All pass

West opened the king of clubs but there was no defense that would prevent declarer from making ten tricks losing a trick in each of the plain suits. However, the game had not been bid. Whose fault? Let's tune in on the cross table discussion.

'You might have rebid,' protested North getting in the first blow. 'You had a pretty strong hand—much stronger than a minimum bid.'

'True enough,' replied South. 'But your bid immediately over West's double was strictly pre-emptive. It warned me against going too high, unless forced to it, to take a sacrifice against the opponents. What you said when you bid two hearts in that spot was 'partner, I don't have more than about one honor trick in high cards and about two winners. I hope to keep East quiet but don't get excited. I'm bidding strictly form weakness.' Instead you had an absolutely average hand. Your 10 points represented the entire balance of power. If I had a bid and West had a double East must be busted. You should have shown that by redoubling.

'But a redouble asks you to pass whatever East might bid and I'm not going to be able to double the opponents unless they get considerably higher than one spade or two in a minor. So what good is the redouble?' North asked.

North confused the part of the redouble strategy with another. The redouble does ask partner to pass but it does not promise that he'll double anything the opponents bid. It merely promises that he will take some action if the bid is allowed to come around. In this case he had enough to raise the heart suit even to the three level if need be. Meanwhile it was important to tell South that his hand was strong, not weak.

Lady Churchill To Launch New Liner

First of three new liners to be built especially for the Cunard's Canadian service will be launched on February 17 by Lady Churchill at John Brown and Company's bustling Clydebank yard.

Saxonia, as the new ship will be named, will go down the same slipway that earlier carried the mighty Cunarders Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth into the narrow River Clyde.

The first Saxonia made her maiden voyage in 1900 and was announced as the last word in passenger comfort.

CANADIAN THEME

In keeping with the trade the Saxonia will follow, the decor of her public rooms will be representative of Canadian history and the Canadian way of life.

Some of the designs will stem from the colorful patterns used by Canadian Indians in their tribal blankets.

5 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral tributes received from our many friends in Victoria and other points in our recent sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved mother, sister and grandmother, Ethel May Pussey. Our special thanks to Dr. A. G. Vey, Dr. T. P. Rose, sisters and nurses of St. Joseph's Hospital, for their wonderful care. Also Rev. P. Johnson and McCall Brothers' Funeral Home.—The Family of the late Mrs. E. M. Pussey.

The family of the late A. R. Minnis wish to express their appreciation of the many kind expressions of sympathy and for the beautiful floral tributes received during their recent bereavement. Special thanks to the groups who attended the memorial service, the soloist, Miss Merna Jenkins, Beller Funeral Home of Bismarck, N.D., U.S.A., Thompson Funeral Parlor of Victoria and the Rev. J. C. W. McLean for his consoling words.—Mrs. Ola Minnis and daughter Laurel.

Where on Earth

Is The Ghost Town

That Wouldn't Stay Dead?

The recently published announcement that Russia would test a cobalt nuclear bomb by 1955, with greater destructive powers than either the atom or hydrogen bombs, focuses attention on Cobalt, Ontario, destined to become North America's principle producer of the all-important metal. This little mining community, some 330 miles north of Toronto, is known affectionately by mining men throughout the world as "the ghost town that wouldn't stay dead."

Cobalt was born in 1903 when the Temiskaming Northern Ontario Railway was extending its track into the wilderness beyond North Bay. Fred La Rose, a French-Canadian blacksmith in the work gang, threw his hammer at a fox and missed. When he retrieved his tool, however, he picked up a piece of rock chipped from the right of way wall that turned out to be almost solid silver! But two devasting fires, three major epidemics and a $300,000,000 silver bonanza later, Cobalt lapsed into the status of a ghost town for twenty years. Tourists slowed their cars when passing through the town to see its empty homes and stores, and the gaunt headframes of mines that had once produced fabulous fortunes.

Today, tourists slow down for traffic on Cobalt's main street. The reason: Its mines are rich in cobalt, once considered a nuisance by miners, but now recognized as one of the most versatile and valuable metals on earth. When cobalt is treated in atomic ovens, it acquires and holds all the properties of radium. Costing only $2 per pound, it bring irradiation treatment within reach of even the poorest cancer sufferers.

But to offset this beneficial use of the metal five years before Russia's cobalt bomb test was disclosed, scientists announced that irradiated cobalt powder distributed to the prevailing winds of the strato- [illegible] living animal, plant and human being on earth. With this in mind, let us thank God that the little community "that wouldn't stay dead"—with its precious treasure—is in the custody of an historically peace-abiding nation.

Naval Garage Collapses

The new $320,000 motor-transport and administration building at Shearwater naval air base across the harbor from Halifax, considered an armed forces showpiece, collapsed mysteriously. Naval officers said they believe the building may be a total loss. There were no injuries. Government agencies have retained an outside expert to investigate the collapse of the newly-built garage.—(CP photo.)

Martin Luther at Dominion

Martin Luther (Niall MacGinnis), the 16th century monk who split Church and Empire through his demand for religious reform, nails his fame-destined "95 Theses" to the door of the Wittenberg Church. The scene is from the dramatic feature film, "Martin Luther," produced on location in Western Germany by Louis de Rochemont Associates, now showing at the Dominion.

Hon. M. R. Bridgeman, C.B.E. A. F. Down, O.B.E., M.C.

E. H. Tanner, President of Triad Oil Co. Ltd., announces the appointment of two additional directors, the Honorable M. R. Bridgeman, C.B.E., and A. F. Down, O.B.E., M.C. Both were nominated to the Triad Board by D'Arcy Exploration Company Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Anglo-Iranian. D'Arcy Exploration recently made a substantial purchase of Triad shares.

Mr. Bridgeman, who is Managing Director of D'Arcy Exploration, and Mr. Down were members of the party from Anglo-Iranian which visited Canada last August. Mr. Down will be Anglo-Iranian's resident representative in Canada.

Mr. Bridgeman joined Anglo-Iranian in 1926. During the war he was Petroleum Adviser to the Ministry of Economic Warfare in 1939 and was lent in the same capacity to the Government of India in 1942. From 1944 to 1946 he was Principal Assistant Secretary, Petroleum Division, Ministry of Fuel and Power.

Mr. Down joined Anglo-Iranian in 1938 after qualifying as a Chartered Accountant. He has worked in Haifa, Abadan, and in the Persian oilfields as well as at Anglo-Iranian's London headquarters. During the war, after serving in the Middle East and Italy, he was with the Canadian forces in Belgium, Holland and Germany, ending his war services as a Colonel on the staff of Canadian Army Headquarters.

On the Labor Front

BY BILL MAVOR

Demands for fringe benefits and fewer cash gains in this year's contract negotiations will be high on the agenda at the 17th annual International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) convention opening Monday at Vancouver.

Some 160 delegates representing 32,000 B.C. IWA members will attend the four-day meeting.

George Mitchell, district secretary, said most of the wage resolutions submitted to him deal with pay for statutory holidays, employer-paid welfare plans, full union security and other non-cash demands.

TO SHAPE POLICY

Final pay proposals won't be made until the union's wage conference March 13 and 14, but the 1954 wage policy will take shape at the convention.

In all, delegates will vote on some 150 resolutions dealing with provincial labor legislation, old age pensions, unemployment insurance, social security, the Labor Relations Board and internal union matters.

Among the top labor leaders scheduled to attend the convention are Charles H. Millard, vice-president of the Canadian Congress of Labor and Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America, and Al Hartung, IWA international president, who is expected from his headquarters at Portland.

REPORT PUBLISHED

One or more of nine internal factors were present in harmonious union-management relations, it has been found in studies of industrial peace.

A final report entitled "Causes of Industrial Peace Under Collective Bargaining" was published recently by the National Planning Association, a non-profit and non-political organization in the United States. The final report followed 13 studies of union-management relations.

A brief sketch of the factors is contained in the current Canadian Unionist (CCL).

One or more of nine internal factors present in each case included full acceptance by management of the collective bargaining process and of unionism as an institution; a strong union being considered an asset to management; the union was strong, responsible and democratic; the company stayed out of the union's internal affairs and does not seek to alienate the workers' allegiance to the union; mutual confidence and trust existed between the parties and neither adopted a legalistic approach to the solution of problems; negotiations were centred on problems rather than abstract principles, and grievances were settled promptly in the local plant wherever possible, with a flexible and informal procedure; and private ownership and operation of industry.

AWARD ACCEPTED

The International Longshoremen's Union at Chemainus, Port Alberni, New Westminster and Vancouver has accepted a federal conciliation board recommendation for a six-cent an hour wage increase.

Union negotiating committee chairman William Henderson said the majority report had been recommended for acceptance, except a clause calling for a two-year contract. There also was a protest, he said, "to the lack of retroactivity provided for in the majority report."

About 1,600 longshoremen are affected by the negotiations, and Henderson said the committee is prepared to meet the B.C. Shipping Federation and to sign a contract. The federation has already accepted the majority report.

CONTRACT MEETING

In negotiations by the Victoria Building Industries Exchange and the painters' union here, another meeting is to be held soon concerning a proposed 1954 contract with six major employers.

Several minor points have been settled but remaining are clauses involving the major demands of wages and a welfare plan.

START PLANNED

Organization of national defense civilian employees in air force, army and navy stations throughout the province into the new National Defense Employees' Association will begin in mid-summer, reports provincial organizer J. E. Carey.

Most of the workers now are in local associations and it is hoped to place them into the national organization to give greater strength.

A Vancouver Island branch of the association is now in force, with 1,100 workers in Dockyard here on the rolls.

LOCALS MEETING

TLC locals meeting this week include carpenters, riggers, Monday; electricians, Tuesday; Trades and Labor Council, laundry drivers, Wednesday; milk salesmen, Thursday; and laborers, sheet metal workers, Friday.

CCL locals meeting include Div. 276, CBRE, Thursday.

Dealers Elect Two Victorians

Two Victoria men were elected as officers of the Motor Dealers' Association of British Columbia at the organization's annual meeting in Vancouver, Thursday.

J. M. Wood was elected second vice-president and Harry Glad well elected as a director.

The new president of the association is George Mussallem, of Haney. Gordon Smith was the choice for first vice-president.

Other directors installed were J. A. Ferguson of Nelson, E. Salvador of Creston and Max Blunt of Nanaimo.

Gunners Get New Beret

Artillerymen in Victoria are wearing a different beret these days. The bright red flash on the front of the headdress has been discarded.

Detachments from 119 Battery will fire the salute to mark the opening the British Columbia Legislature on Tuesday.

The saluting battery will be commanded by Capt. William Pittendreigh.

TENTLIKE JUMPER

The jumper dress has always been a schoolgirl favorite and this year it has a high fashion quotient as well. New ones shown in Paris are cut tent-fashion, to button down the front and worn with or without a belt — an easy style for the home sewer to duplicate.

Now on the market are combination shoulder protectors and lingerie-strap retainers that wash and dry like a piece of china. Moulded of pink polythene, they're flexible, comfortable to wear and both warm and soft to the touch.

Man of Amiable Myths

Jack Benny, 39, Turns 60 Today

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Today is not only Valentine's Day. It is a notable milestone for Jack Benny. He is 60 years old.

This man, who's been 39 long enough for a whole generation of babies to grow old enough to vote, occupies a special sort of niche. In years in show business, he has made few enemies. Maybe none.

There may be a reason. Benny rarely kids anyone else; he's too busy kidding himself. He's made a fortune out of being the butt of his own jokes. That makes it hard for anyone else to get mad at him.

SECRET GIFTS

Anyone who knows will tell you that Benny is one of the most generous men in town. He is a perpetual gift giver, widely known for his charitable work. Yet, while many a star sends along press agents with each contribution, Benny prefers secrecy.

Another Benny myth is his lack of violin skill.

To this day, the fiddle is his great love, except for his wife and daughter. Successful as he is as a comic, he occasionally broods over what might have happened had he practiced the violin more as a child. Waukegan, Ill., knew Benny as a child prodigy. Even in grammar school he was good enough to play in the pit orchestra of the local vaudeville house.

Another favorite Benny myth is his constant reference to his toupee — always good for a laugh. Jack has a good head of hair. One running gag on the Benny show concerns Mary Livingstone's job behind the hosiery counter at the May Co. That's no myth. She actually was working there when she and Jack started getting serious about each other.

They have been married 27 years and she has been an important part of the act almost as long. A job with Benny amounts to a lifetime career. Don Wilson has been with him 20 years, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson 17, and Dennis Day more than 15.

Even his writers have been with him 11 years.

A Lot Used, Less Available

They Grumble, Probe, Explain—Coffee Stays High

NEW YORK (AP)—Consumers grumble, the government investigates and Latin Americans explain—and still the price of coffee in the United States remains skyhigh.

What goes on? There have been explanations and statements from growers, importers, roasters and interested bystanders. The important facts are these:

Coffee consumption is high—it has held steady in the United States and has been increasing in Europe. At the same time, producing countries say the crop that will be harvested in July will be below normal because of frosts in Brazil and too much rain in Colombia and Venezuela.

Officials of the New York Coffee Exchange, testifying before a Senate sub-committee investigating soaring prices, gave these statistics:

Brazil's 1953-54 coffee crop was estimated last July 1 at 16,900,000 bags of 132 pounds each. Since the frost, the estimate has been trimmed to 14,000,000 bags.

For the 1954-55 crop, the long-range estimate was 17,900,000 bags. This has been cut to 12,700,000.

Green coffee prices started to climb shortly after the frost reports came in. Roasters, faced with the prospect of replacing their current stocks with green coffee bought at much higher prices, began raising their wholesale price tags. By and large, they averaged the cost of stocks on hand with the cost of coffee being bought at high prices for delivery in the future.

As a result, coffee is selling in most U.S. stores more than $1 a pound. In some places it's up to $1.09 or so.

Congressmen, sharing the feeling of many that somebody's making a lot of money out of the rise in coffee, are investigating the situation. Charges by some congressmen that speculation in coffee futures is to blame have led to Senate passage of a bill to bring coffee trading under federal supervision.

There is evidence that the consumer is doing something about the problem, too—by buying less coffee.

Dun & Bradstreet's survey of retail trade notes that in the week ended February 3 "coffee sales dipped again as growing price resistence was noted. Sales of tea were substantially higher than in 1953 and above the preceding week."

Joseph G. Vaskas, chief tea buyer for the great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., predicts that U.S. consumption of tea may double or triple in the next 10 years. Vaskas observes that while the price of coffee in the home now is about three cents a cup, the average price of tea is less than a penny a cup.

Several makers of instant coffee report that consumers are drinking more and more of their product, which they say is economical because there's no waste.

In many cities, restaurants have raised their prices for a cup of coffee to 15 cents. On the other hand, a leading food company contends a restaurant can serve a cup of coffee at a cost of 3½ cents, including ingredients and overhead.

The Union News Co., which operates several hundred restaurants, put up signs recently urging its patrons to drink tea. Since then, officials say, coffee sales have declined and there has been a compensating increase in orders for tea, milk and hot chocolate.

Gold Coast Voters Face Full Election

ACCRA, Gold Coast (Reuters) — For the first time in their history all the eligible voters in the Gold Coast, one of Britain's African colonies now heading rapidly for self-government, will be able to elect members directly to the legislative assembly in the colony's second general election due to take place in May or June.

In the last elections, held in 1951, only a proportion of the members of the assembly were elected by direct vote. This time the number of members of the assembly will be increased from 84 to 104, and all will be elected directly by the people.

Since there is no electoral roll, the first phase of the electoral campaign will be to get eligible voters to register. During the registration period, 19 movie and public address trucks, each based at a strategic point, will cover the area, stopping wherever there are a few mud huts. Leaflets are distributed which set out the details carefully in one of 10 different languages.

A big question is how many women will register. In many villages, particularly in the north, it depends on the attitude of the local chief. If he decides that the women shall register, all will do so. If he says they will not, not one will make her mark.

F. H. Emery, Chairman — Patrick G. Strachan, Secretary-Treasurer

ONCE THERE WAS A MAN . . .

. . . who griped and fussed every time he picked up a newspaper.

"All this advertising makes me sick!" he'd say. "If they want to get MY business, they can stop all this expensive advertising and make their prices lower. That would do me some good!"

Then his dutiful wife would say "You're perfectly right, John dear. Every time we buy a can of soup or a package of cereal . . . or anything for that matter . . . part of our money goes to pay for these big ads."

"Yes," John would say, "and imagine what it amounts to when we buy a big thing like a refrigerator or a car!"

So John and his wife always thought they were getting a better deal when the sales clerk would say, "The reason this article costs less is that the manufacturer doesn't advertise." They would always buy it because they had found a "bargain"!

Poor John! He just couldn't see beyond his own nose! And neither could his wife! BECAUSE HERE ARE THE FACTS . . .

Advertising doesn't cost you money when you buy something. It actually SAVES you money! Through advertising, a manufacturer or a retailer can so increase the demand for his goods that he secures "volume sales" — he sells a lot of goods to a lot of people — instead of just a few things to a few people. And the more he sells, the lower his price-per-unit can be.

Thus, by telling a lot of people about a product, and persuading them to buy it, advertising makes it possible for ALL of those people to buy that product at a price FAR LOWER than would otherwise be possible (John and his wife included — if they only knew it!)

True (as John said), when you buy an advertised product, the price you pay includes the cost of the advertising.

But do you know how much it amounts to? Well, in the case of a can of soup it's about a third of a cent! And even in the case of such a "big" thing as a mattress, for example, it's far less than you probably imagined. For, the manufacturer of one of the best-known and largest-selling mattresses actually pays more for the paper carton he puts around each mattress than he does for all the advertising he puts behind it!

And if he [illegible] for advertising, the chances are he'd sell so many fewer mattresses that you'd have to pay a lot more to buy one of them!

All of which means that "it pays to advertise"—pays YOU as well as the advertiser. (Please tell John).

Censorship Subject For Panel

A panel discussion dealing with the issue of the extent to which society is justified in establishing censorship will be held in the Douglas CCF Hall at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, February 24.

Sponsored by the Lower Island Co-operative Commonwealth Youth Movement, the forum is expected to be a lively one in view of the current library censorship issue.

Speakers who have accepted invitations to participate include R. J. Bishop of Victoria College, Hugh Botterell, Victoria lawyer, and Frank Richards, editor of the Saanich Star.

UNABLE TO SPEAK

Frank Snowsell, panel chairman, said Ald. Brent Murdoch, newly-appointed member of the Victoria Public Library Board, had been asked to speak but will be unable to accept because he expects to be out of the city on civil defense business when the discussion is held.

Mr. Snowsell said is now seeking a replacement for Ald. Murdoch.

Panel speakers will be given 10 minutes to express their views. Order of speaking will be determined by a draw at the beginning of the meeting.

Following conclusion of panel speeches, the audience will be invited to ask questions or contribute views. Each audience speaker will be limited to one minute.

TO SUM UP

Each panel speaker will be allowed one minute to sum up his case following the open forum discussion.

A collection will be taken to pay expenses of the meeting. Any excess over actual expenses will be contributed to the B.C. Polio Fund.

Victorian Takes Post In College

John Stanley Plaskett, a member of a scientific family whose name is well known here, recently returned to this continent after many years' residence in England to take an appointment as professor of metallurgy at the University of Virginia, Charlotteville.

Born in Victoria 26 years ago, John Plaskett is the son of Dr. Harry Plaskett, professor of astrophysics at New College, Oxford, and director of the university observatory, and his grandfather was the late Dr. J. S. Plaskett, first director of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, Saanich.

He accompanied his parents to England and received all his scientific training there.

His grandmother, Mrs. J. S. Plaskett, lives at Plaskett Place, Esquimalt.

Engineer's Car Gets Flashers

Robert Doble, city traffic engineer, has been given permission by the motor vehicle branch to mount red flashers on his car for use only when the engineer is employed in traffic light adjustment, repair or regulation.

Man Sentenced To Two Years

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—Lawrence Shairp, 22, was sentenced here Friday to two years in penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to five charges of obtaining money with fraudulent cheques almost two years ago.

Shairp, who committed the offences here in March, 1952, was located by RCMP in Oakalla prison where he was serving a sentence for auto theft.

Shairp admitted passing a worthless cheque for $600, drawn on a non-existent branch of a chartered bank and other cheques totaling about $250.

POLIO DRIVE DOUBLES AIM IN ONE NIGHT

Mrs. Hector Campbell and Mrs. Len Keyworth are shown above, centre and right, counting early collections from last night's Mothers' March for funds for the Kinsmen's B.C. Polio Fund. At least three $100 bills are among contributions shown. At left is Mrs. Jim Lackie with doll she made for a Kinsman raffle that produced $318.29 for the Polio Fund. The doll was won by Mrs. A. Wilmot, 1188 Roslyn.

Marching Mothers Collect $62,540

Victorians dug deep in their pockets to assist the Mothers' March on Polio last night—dug to the extent of more than $60,000 or double the drive's objective during a brief 90 minutes.

With yet more to come by way of mailed cheques and an outdoor theatre meeting tonight, A grand total of $62,540 was announced by officials last night.

Bewildered campaign officials shouted with joy each time a new figure was chalked up on the blackboard at campaign headquarters.

"As far as the Kinsmen are concerned we are more than proud and gratified to administer a campaign that the citizens feel needs such a tremendous support as polio," said Jack Philion, club president.

An army of volunteer workers bent over desks counting money. The huge boxes of envelopes containing this money were checked and double-checked.

Volunteer canvassers told of the enthusiastic way they were greeted at thousands of city homes. There were the human interest stories too, such as the little boy who gave 23 cents he made by selling pussy willow at a roadside stand, or the aged pensioner who donated 50 cents even though he couldn't afford it.

"The totals from many districts more than surpass those given for Community Chest," said Mr. Philion. "The collectors did a wonderful job."

There were close to 3,800 mothers canvassing through the city from 6.30 to 7.30 p.m.

The money was brought into campaign headquarters, counted then sent to the B.C. Electric offices where it was recounted and bundled up. The money was then banked—the bank remaining open especially for the purpose.

One woman in Oak Bay made 20 calls and came in with $120.

The response of the mothers was so great that all those wishing to help in the canvassing could not be used. Kinsmen said last night they deeply appreciated those volunteers.

"It's unbelievable. Have you ever seen anything like it?" chortled Mr. Philion, when the $60,000 mark was reached. "This is the first campaign the Kinsmen have ever run. And the total expenses are well under $1,000."

Hughie Francis and Bud Page, district organizers, praised the support of both the mothers and the people of Victoria. "It's just too terrific," said Mr. Page.

The last Community Chest started out on October 1 to get $210,000. By October 16 they had only $93,000 compared with the $62,540 collected by the Kinsmen in an hour and a half last night.

High praise was showered last night on marching mothers and Kinsmen who carried their one-hour porch-light drive for contributions for the B.C. Polio Fund to a resounding success.

"It just goes to show what a well-organized and enthusiastic effort will produce for such a deserving objective," he declared.

Dr. J. L. Murray Anderson, medical superintendent of Royal Jubilee Hospital, treatment centre of all Vancouver Island polio victims, described the drive as "very worthwhile."

"The efforts of the Kinsmen were most helpful in providing us with equipment last year," he said. "This will mean a great deal to those who already have polio and place us in a secure position to meet any epidemic which may come next summer."

Logan Mayhew, chairman of the board of directors of Queen Alexandra Solarium, where many young post-polio patients receive rehabilitation treatment, declared the success of the drive will do a great deal to alleviate suffering and to provide equipment to help in the future.

Courtney Haddock, vice-president of the Community Chest and chairman of the committee which handled the Chest's 1953 drive for funds, joined in commending those responsible for success of the polio fund campaign.

But he said it is unlikely that the Community Chest would try another one-night porch-light campaign as it did in 1950 and 1951, despite the over-subscription to the polio fund campaign.

Mr. Haddock said the short, porch-light drives have great dramatic appeal, but doubted that even this type of appeal would be enough to raise the annual amount required by the Chest, which now exceeds $200,000.

Mr. Haddock said he would like to see one combined drive for all medical charities such as polio, cancer, arthritis, multiple sclerosis and cerebral palsy, and a single united appeal for other types of charities.

It is too bad, he said, that surpluses from drives which go beyond their objectives because of their dramatic appeal cannot go to other deserving charities a United States citizen, was with less of this type of appeal, ordered to leave but refused.

Burns Fatal To Two

DUNCAN — A mother and daughter, both badly burned in a house fire last Wednesday, died within a few hours of each other yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Melinda Barrett, 74, died on Saturday morning in hospital and her daughter, Mrs. Ivy Holen, 45, died Saturday evening. Both suffered third degree burns in the fire.

Police believe Mrs. Holen's night clothes caught fire while she was lighting a circulating heater in the living room of their home at 732 Trunk Road.

Mrs. Barrett's clothing caught fire when she went to the assistance of her daughter whose movements were restricted a cast on her leg.

The two women, both in a state of shock, were discovered sitting in the kitchen by a neighbor, Dick Price, and were rushed to King's Daughters' Hospital.

Mrs. Holen was born in Duncan. Her mother came to this district 50 years ago from Missouri.

There will be a double inquest next week.

Vexing Issues Encountered In Labor Field

The Daily Colonist today presents the first of a series of articles on labor-management relations and on British Columbia's controversial Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act. The Colonist believes the subject is of particular interest at this time, with British Columbia in the midst of an unprecedented industrial expansion which will depend for its ultimate success very largely on harmonious labor relations.

The government has indicated that the act will be amended at the forthcoming session of the legislature, but has given no indication what direction the amendments will take.

The author of the series is E. E. Pearlman, QC (Ont.), a distinguished Victoria lawyer who has wide experience with labor law and in labor negotiations, acting both for management and labor. The opinions he expresses are his own and not necessarily those of The Daily Colonist.

BY E. E. PEARLMAN, QC (ONT.)

Is British Columbia industry, with the highest average wage rate in Canada, being priced out of the market by high labor costs? Should international unions with headquarters in the U.S.A. interfere with negotiations in Canada between Canadian employees of Canadian companies? Should strikes be permitted when the welfare of the community as a whole is endangered? Is the British Columbia Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act slanted in favor of labor? Should a man be denied the right to earn a living because he refuses to join, or is expelled from a union? These are highly controversial questions which many British Columbia employers are now asking.

On the other hand there are equally controversial questions coming from trade union circles. Why shouldn't an employer be compelled to distribute a fair share of his profits among his employees? Why shouldn't management put up the necessary funds to enable a long-term employee to enjoy a well-earned pension? Why should the government, or any agency, for that matter, supervise or scrutinize the taking of a strike vote? Should the courts be permitted to interfere by injunction, or otherwise, in labor disputes?

In this day of peak industrial activity, most of us have pondered these questions. Many, if not all of us, have felt the effect of a strike. Perhaps not directly, but certainly indirectly. Perhaps not in loss of wages, but most assuredly in some other form, such as lack of transportation, scarcity of commodities, increase in prices, or merely inconvenience. It is safe to say that all of us at one time or another have been directly and deeply concerned by the mere threat of a strike.

Noisy Strife Heard

Scarcely a week passes that we do not read of a dispute between an employer and his employees. We hear accusations, recriminations and fulminations by management and by labor. We read of conferences, consultations and negotiations. We hear of labor relations, collective bargaining, grievance procedure, boards of conciliation, arbitration, fringe benefits, closed shops, feather bedding, welfare funds and numerous other strange terms peculiar to this field of human relationship.

It is not my intention to deal with this difficult subject of labor relations in a technical or narrow sense. On the contrary, I shall endeavor to clarify in general terms the more interesting and most common problems involved. The views expressed are my own.

I well realize that industrial disputes sometimes become violently bitter, and that the parties to the dispute usually have firm, fixed and one-sided views. However, having been privileged to sit in on numerous employer-employee disputes, perhaps I can perform a useful service by a frank but fair discussion of the problems of both labor and management.

At any rate, with full knowledge of the difficulties involved, but with malice toward none, I shall give my own views of some phases of the British Columbia Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act, present trends in labor legislation, trade union activities, picketing, lockouts, injunctions and other related subjects.

Not so many years ago it was unlawful for a number of workmen to band together and make demands upon their employer. Such action was considered to be criminal conspiracy or combination in restraint of trade. Today not only is it lawful for employees to form unions, guilds or associations, it is in fact unlawful for the employer to refuse to negotiate with them. It is contrary to law for an employer to refuse to employ any person, or discriminate against any person, because he happens to be a member of a trade union or employees' association.

Abrupt Acceptance Upsets Soviet Line

BERLIN (UP)—The Western Allies, in a surprise attempt to force Soviet agreement to the Austrian state treaty, accepted yesterday all Russia's proposed changes to the last five articles blocking acceptance of the pact.

The Allied manoeuver was proposed by U.S. Secretary of State Dulles and caught Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov flat-footed.

At the end of a four-hour debate, the United States, Britain and France agreed to accept Soviet amendments to five articles of the treaty on which Big Four agreement has stalled.

Molotov, surprised and apparently dismayed, insisted the articles be turned over to the foreign minister's deputies. He then agreed to discuss the Western acceptance of the articles Sunday afternoon.

The concessions offered by the West would, among other things, give the Russians enormous economic booty, including payment in cash or goods of $150,000,000 for former German assets left in Austria.

Wreck Of Jet Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) U.S. air force investigating teams yesterday waded through deep snow probing the wreckage of an F86 Sabre Jet strewn along a Grouse Mountain ski run.

The officers arrived from McChord Field, Wash. less than 24 hours after the plane, piloted by Lieut. Lamar J. Barlow of Tacoma, Wash., rammed into the mountainside in a misty rainstorm.

The jet was on a routine flight from McChord when the electronic compass failed and the pilot became lost. After sending a distress call, he picked up radio beams from McChord and Blaine, Wash., and was believed planning to make an emergency landing here when he crashed.

However, Maj. Craig Fairbun, leader of the investigating team, said yesterday that Barlow may have thought he was over Tacoma at the time.

Maj. Fairbun said the wreckage would be kept under strict security guard until detonating teams have exploded or defused cannon-type rockets which the plane carried.

London Murder Like Holmes Case

LONDON (UP) Scotland Yard sifted through 4,000 love letters Saturday for clues in the double murder of "Lady" Mary Menzies and her exotic daughter.

The letters, dating back to 1934, traced the adventurous life of Isobel Chesney, Mrs. Menzie's daughter, through the sunny spot of the golden Riviera Coast to her death in an old folks' home in a London suburb Thursday.

The Yard also flashed an appeal for help to international police headquarters in Paris to hunt a tall, curly-headed, bearded man with pierced ears for questioning.

The bizarre double-murder was assuming many of the aspects of a Sherlock Holmes mystery plot. The setting was a rambling two-story Victorian building occupied by 19 aged men and women; the victims a "china doll-like" elderly woman who claimed nobility and her attractive fun-loving daughter. The murderer was believed to have struck around midnight after a tryst with the younger woman; and there were two dogs that didn't bark, which police said indicated the killer was known to them.

California Hit By Rain, Floods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A broad storm marched through California yesterday, closing trans-continental highways, battering the coast with howling gales and threatening the lowlands with floods.

In Southern California, one of the heaviest rainstorms in three years brought flood damage to widespread areas of Los Angeles and Ventura counties.

The weather bureau in a special warning forecast two to four inches in Southern California coastal and mountain regions by tonight.

Forecaster E. S. Kurtz said some sections of Southern California may get as much as six inches of rain, a prediction which renewed fears of flooding in foothill areas.

Bus and car passengers were evacuated by lifeguards in rowboats at some intersections in Santa Monica and west Los Angeles.

At one depressed Los Angeles intersection witnesses reported a car went under water and the motorist came up swimming.

Hundreds of homes in the Los Angeles metropolitan area were flooded, slides blocked some highways, thousands of automobiles were stalled and a funeral had to be postponed when the hearse was flooded.

Water 10 feet deep was reported from one area in west Los Angeles when a storm drain became plugged on Eastborne Avenue in a hollow. Six cars, their doors closed and windows up, floated about on a temporary lake. When the plug gave way and the water drained, a sedan came to rest atop a convertible which hadn't floated.

Ava Gardner, Cast, Adrift

SAN REMO, Italy (AP)—Ava Gardner and almost the whole cast of the film "The Barefoot Countess" were missing Saturday for several hours after they sailed from here in a tiny boat.

The boat carrying Miss Gardner, American director Joseph Mankiewicz and Italian actors Valentina Cortese and Rossano Brazzi, ran out of fuel in rough sea and went adrift off the Italian Riviera.

Nickel to 20 Cents for Coffee

Cup Cost Likely To Stay Put

Coffee is being sold in Victoria restaurants at prices ranging from five cents to 20 cents a cup—and the situation is likely to stay just the way it is.

Despite the increase in bulk coffee prices, restaurateurs are just a little afraid that a rise in the cost per cup would alienate the affections of some of their customers. One U.S. coffee wholesaler has been quoted in a news magazine as saying a 10-cent-a-pound increase would be required to justify a boost of one cent a cup at the counter.

A Colonist survey last night indicated that only one out of a score of restaurants was considering raising the price.

"The whole matter has been left to the discretion of the individual operators," said Philip Chan, president of the Victoria Restaurant Association, last night.

Nickel cups of coffee are obtainable at Woolworth's, Kresge's and Metropolitan stores.

Proprietors of restaurants said to be charging 20 cents a cup could not be pinned down last night. The price of the coffee was always "included" in the meal, one said.

"We don't sell coffee by it-self," said Fred Hume, owner of the Little Harbor Swiss restaurant. "On the other hand, I think restaurants should charge 15 cents a cup."

Elmer D. McEwen, managing director of Terry's, said the price would remain at a dime there.

"It costs me six cents a cup without any handling at all," said Mr. McEwen. "There are wages to be paid on top of that."

Only owner who said he was considering raising the price was T. W. Ravanos of the Cameo Cafe. "It's still a dime, but it should be higher. We are thinking of raising this," he said.

Most city hotels charge 25 cents for a pot of coffee in their dining rooms. A pot usually holds a little more than two cups. (See also story on page 33.)

Inflated coffee prices mean the difference between cafe coffee and thermos coffee to these nurses. Their hospital coffee bar, to keep ahead of the price jump, pushed its price from seven cents to 10 cents. Nurses Mrs. Ida Gough, holding the 10-cent piece, and Miss Elsa Nielsen, conduct a quiet private protest by taking their own coffee to the bar with them.

Rome Police Chisel Name Off Church

ROME (AP) — Italian police descended yesterday upon Rome's Church of Christ, chiseled its name off a wall and took a news photographer of the Associated Press into custody for photographing them.

They vainly ordered an AP correspondent away from the scene.

The word "Christ," in six-inch-high letters, was the first word removed in this action against the Protestant religious organization, which has United States financial backing.

The police struck quietly after worshippers were forced to leave a Church of Christ in Leghorn late Friday night.

AP photographer Remo Nassi, an Italian citizen, was seized with his camera and hustled off in a police car despite protests. AP correspondent Allan Jacks, a United States citizen, was ordered to leave but refused.

Detective Adventure Starts in Colonist Today

It is the second in a series of reprints of the sleuthing adventures of the world's most famous fictional detective by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle still rated as the greatest mystery writer ever. The first in the series, "A Scandal in Bohemia," concluded yesterday.

In "The Adventures of Wisteria Lodge" Sherlock Holmes manages—despite the local constabulary—to solve the murder of a would-be murderer. But not even he can catch the culprit.

Speak Your Mind on Party Lines

Week's Winner Brief, Anonymous

BY THE JUDGE

This week's winner really took The Judge at his word. He asked you to tell us about your party line "in 100 words or less." And Mrs. J. R. Horgan, East Sooke, took us up on the "or less" part—her winning letter, worth $25, was just two sentences long. As a matter of fact, it was exactly 25 words—a dollar a word! We've heard of lots of well-known authors who don't get paid that much.

Mrs. Horgan could almost qualify for the coming week's contest, because she was embarrassed at winning. "Ooh, my neighbors will murder me!" she exclaimed.

And just to protect Mrs. Horgan from irate party liners (her letter was signed with a nom-de-plume) we are not going to reprint it. You'll have to guess which of last week's letters was written by Mrs. Horgan.

Today's winner for the best letter from the day's mailbag gets $2 for being, without doubt, the most long-suffering telephoner on a party-line. The letter reads:

Dear Judge,

Have you ever listened to a hockey broadcast via telephone?

Our party used to broadcast them regularly, presumably for the benefit of a shut-in friend.

ANOTHER READER.

(We notice the past tense in your letter. Presumably you found out who the broadcaster was and pounded him into the ground like a fence post?)
